We'll Give You

HRISTMAS is coming-and do you know any one who wouldn't like a Camera for a Christmas present? Anybody can take a picture now-adays and everybody would like to if they may had a camera. You can get more real pleasure out of it than anything you own. You can take snap shots of your friends—you can photograph your pets-you can get pictures of beautiful scenery. A A A A A perfect pocket magazine Camera, carrying sufficient film for four pictures without reloading. The film can be developed and pletures printed at a cost of about 20 cents per dozen. The illustrations will give you an idea of the size of picture taken with "The Comet," If desired they can be canarged at a very small cost.

a Camera For Nothing

Four new subscribers for three weeks each-Two new subscribers for six weeks each-One new subscriber for twelve weekstifully covered with black leatherette and is of the very simplest construction.

It cannot get out of order and is practically indestructable. Should any parts of it be mislaid or lost, they can easily be replaced, as all parts are made interchangeable, and duplicates can be obtained.

"THE COMET" will take a picture one inch square or a round picture one inch in diameter. The directions are so simple a child can successfully use it. The operation of taking a picture is simply to point the camera and press a button. Its small size enables it to be carried with no incon-nience when a person would hesitate about being venience when a person would hesitate about being burdened with a more unwieldly instrument. Size of "The Comet" is 11/4x13/4x2 inches; weighs three ounces.

CRESCENT CAMERA.

The "Crescent" as a high-grade, firstclass camera is not only a surprise, but a delight to the thousands now using them in preference to all others. It takes a photograph three by three inches, the size of the accompanying picture. The size of the camera is 61/2 by 4 by 4 inches.

The "Crescent" is warranted to b first-class in every particular and equal to any $10.00 hand camera on the mar-The "Crescent" is the latest thing out in the camera line. They were first introduced in October, 1896, and the enormous sale of more than 20,000 the first month illustrates the great demand for a popular high grade camera. The "Crescent" is equipped with an achromatic lens ground from the finest imported optical glass, made expressly for the "Crescent" camera and warranted to give equal if not better results than the lenses found in instruments costing from $5.00 to $12.00. The "Crescent" shutter is probably the most perfect ever used on a hand camera. It is adapted to instantaneous or time exposure, and can be changed from one to the other in a second. The "Crescent" is adapted to either plates or films, but as better results are invariably obtained from plates at a less expense, we recommend their use in the "Crescent," at least to start with.

Simultaneously with the final installment

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly is among the first of the Christmas magazines to appear, and it is in every respect a heautiful number. Under the title, "A Magic Island," Beatriz B. De Luna writes entertainingly of the picturesque Catalians of California; Cornell university is described by Herbert Cromble Howe in the second paper on "American Universities and Colleges;" Major General O. O. Howard tells something of the "Character and Campaigns of General Robert E. Lee," and in addition to other attractive features there are numerous short stories and poems and a splendid young folks' department.

Whittier, Holmes, Cella Inakter, Locy com, Phillips Brooks and others, all described with infinite grace. The final chapter is perhaps the beat of all. The sweetness of Mrs. Ward's character phines through and through these "Chapters," constraining one to read in the last one her creed, her opinions regarding her own books and the disquisition urging art for truth's sake, with peculiar and deep interest. Numerous portraits of the people mentioned enhance the volume. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., New York. Clement Caese.

Rarely indeed has such superb excellence been attained as seen in the assortment of holiday remembrances that have just issued from the enterprising house of Raphael Tuck & Sons. Art, poesy and skiil have seldom been combined with more pleasing effect than in the exuberant variety of these productions. One would hardly imagine anything prettier than Katherine Klein's "Remembrance," illustrating lines from Oliver Wendell Holmes; nor a richer variety than in Ellen Elizabeth Burman's poem. "Look Up," illustrated by Ellen Welby, "This and My Good Wishes," consisting of from Shakespeare; "Stepping stones," a text book for every day of week, by Frances Ridley Havergal, Illustrated by Adolph Noether, and "Grains of Gold," by Charlotte Murray, illustrated by York.

"Under the Liberty Tree," by James Otis, Inder the Liberty Tree," by James Otis, is a narrative addressed to juvenile readers, and pictures the events connected with the famous "Boston Massacre." Among these "A enjoyable evening with "Ring o' Rushes." Mother of Five' is delightfully romantic, portraying the little motherless daughter of a miner and her doll family of five extraodi-nary children. "In the Tules" is a touching love story, in which but a single sex figures. It reveals the romantic love of a solitary Pike county rancher for Captain Jack Des pard, one of those handsome desperadoes that are only found made to order in books. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston. Megeath's. Ye good old times are picturesquely revived in Frank Samuel Child's "The Colonial Parson in New England." Few public functions in the town life of those creeping days, in which the sturdy parson did not figure conspicuously. Whatever questions were broached, what plans were devised, what tasks were achieved, he was invariably a powerful factor in the issue. In this book the rugged personality of the colonial parson is given an intelligent and discriminating treatment, refreshing and deepening the loyal and loving remembrance in which he is held. The delineation is not only more clearly outlined through the countless incidents revived, but is imbued with life and color and a fascination peculiarly charmling. interesting. The subject, it is true, is not a gunpowder warrior, but nevertheless is of applause to cheer and no excitement in the blood to make one forget the dangers of the hour. He was one of the storming party who, with Garrison and Phillips, led humanity to a higher plane—to a loftler manhood. He was pre-eminently a man of character, who preferred right to the emulation of men. As a prophet of freedom, submitting to the offium of an unpopular cause, he manifested the spirit of the true poet as distinguished from the Jingler of rhymes.
