HARD LINES FOR A SHOPLIFTER. Stolen Property is Identified by Local

Nellie Wilson, alias Anna March, alias Mrs. Jack Quinlan, arrested last Wednesday on the charge of shoplifting, has a good chance of spending the major portion of the new year in jail. The following firms have identified as a portion of their stock articles which were found in the mass of property that was recovered at the woman's home Hayden Bres., Boston Store, Thompson, Belden & Co., W. R. Bennett company, T. B. Norris, Mrs. Benson, Thomas Kilpatrick & and O. K. Seefield.

In each of the cases the woman is charged with petty largeny, because it was impossi-ble to prove that the woman stole $35 worth of goods at any one time from any one of the stores. The woman has practically acknowledged her guilt and assisted in pickout the goods that were taken from the different stores.

The treasurer of the district testified at the hearing on the application that he had placed the money in the bank for safekeeping because he had no place in which the money would be safe and he denied that he had received any interest on the deposit.

BURGLAR WHO USED AN AXE. Secures Only a Few Pennies in Return for His Trouble.

When C. W. Hull, manager for the C. W. Hull company, dealers in coal and cement at Twentieth and Izard streets, entered his office early yesterday morning, from appearances he believed that a baby cyclone had place. Further examination developed, however, that the condition of the office had been caused by a playful burglar with an axe and a liberal supply of Christmas cheer on board. Every article of furniture in the office was battered, cut and backed. In his search for valuables the burglar had not stopped to unlock or to force drawers, but with a blow of an axe had split open every desk in writing desk were both smashed. The apparently angered that his visit was withdid not obtain much for his pains. He got 30 cents in pennies and a few postage stamps.

tween $150 and $200. Entrance into the place was effected from the rear. The crook climbed over a high board fence in the back and was not balked Then he smashed in a panel of the back door same way

Ralph Memersmith was arrested Friday night by Detective Dunn. At that time nothing was known of the burglary, but Messersmith was gathered in on account of an escapade of several nights ago. He and one Fred Bruner were suspected of robbing a case in front of the store of A. Anderson, at 2211 Cuming street, about a week ago. They were spotted several nights ago by Officer Drummy and another policeman. Drummy grabbed Messersmith, but while he was leading him to a patrol box some-body in a buggy ran against the officer, knocking him down and badly injuring him. Messersmith got away. Bruner, however, was arrested and is now in jail.

Detective Dunn saw Messersmith at 6 o'clock at Seventeenth and Paul strects. As soon as the man saw the detective, he ran down the street, and it was only after an extended chase that he was captured. In his flight he dropped some pennies, but when he was finally caught he still had fourteen pennies and a key in his hand. The key had been identified by Hull as the one to his safe. Messersmith was intoxicated. The prisoner was charged Friday night with resisting Officer Drummy, but the charge was changed to burglary yester

NEWSBOYS ARE TO HAVE A TIME. Rival Blowouts to Be Held New

The newsboys and the bootblacks of the city need not want for a good time and plenty to eat on New Year's night. There are to be two opposition blowouts on that night, and, judging from the plans, the street Arabs will find it hard to choose beween them. One is to be given by Mogy Bernstein, the newsboy, and the other by Derman Cohen, the beotblack.

Mogy's affair will occur in his bootblack arlors, at 1416 Farnam street. Most extensive plans have been made for it. It is to be in the nature of a musical and liter ary entertainment, which is to be followed by a feast. Mogy is taking great pride in the fact that he is not soliciting donations for the affair, and has, as a matter of fact, refused offers of donations. He intends that he affair shall be given entirely by himself to his newsboy friends.

Herman Cohen is also arranging for a big time in Morand's dancing academy. The program for the early part of the evening is of a musical character, but will include addresses by Governor Holcomb, Police Judge Gordon, Joseph Crowe, M. F. Singleton, Herman T. Bennington and Frank Burman. When the program is finished the banquet will be served, and this will be followed by Cohen is soliciting donations for the affair, and is selling tickets to such of the citizens as desire to attend.

edy were related by a number of witnesses. The first witness to be called was Dr. Carpenter, who testified to the nature and by the barb wire which was laid on the top, the character of the wounds that Kilkenon had inflicted upon himself and his wife. Regarding the latter he stated that the bullet had gone in obliquely and had lodged in the "left supra-scapular" region, which means in English that it was in the upper part of the left shoulder near the spinal Officer Dillon testified that about 8:30 or the evening of the tragedy Mrs. Kilkenon, Anna Jackson and the former's son spoke to him at Fifteenth and Douglas streets and Mrs. Kilkenon complained that her husband was dogging her and had threatened to shoot The officer spoke to the man, but did not arrest him because the woman simply desired that he be warned not to follow her. He searched the man and found no her. He searched the man and found no weapon. With a few words of warning the officer let him go and Kilkenon followed about a block behind the woman. He did not appear to be under the influence of The officer met Kilkenon again a afteenth and Douglas streets a few minute before the shooting. He was going toward the east. The officer proceeded west and when he reached Sixteenth he heard the two shots and rushed back. The officer testi-fied also that for eight or ten nights before the tragedy he had noticed Kilkenon stand-ing in the doorway of a vacant building at 1514 Douglas street. He said that he was watching the shoppers. The officer stated that the wife had complained to the police regarding the threat of her husband, but no steps were to be taken to arrest him uness the woman caused a warrant to be is

CONCEALED THE REVOLVER. Officers Mike Sullivan and S. E. Fiske were at Fourteenth and Farnam streets whe: they heard the shots. They ran to the scene Both man and weman were lying on the sidewalk when they arrived. The former was dead. Beside his side was a rusty, worn revolver of thirty-two caliber attached t the end of a long string. The other end of the string was about the man's body. The weapon had apparently been hanging at the end of this string inside the man's trousers hus explaining Officer Dillon's failure to ind it. After the arrival of the officers the younded woman was carried into a neigh-oring salcon, the Diamond. The proprietor of the place, Henry Weise was an eyewitness of the affair, as he was standing by the window when it occurred He testified that the woman ran in front, crying, "Murder!" Kilkenon called out, "I told you I would get you." The woman answered, "I will, I will," Kilkenon fired and the woman fell on her face. A few second later the man turned the weapon to his own head and fired. He fell on his back. The woman was carried into the saloon, where Weise heard her say that she could not live with her husband, Anna Jackson, Mrs. Kilkenon's compan ion on the night of the tragedy, testified that the two and Mrs. Kilkenon's son left the Arcade hotel, where the women were em-ployed, at about 8:30 o'clock. Kilkenon was on the corner and followed them to Fif-centh and Douglass streets, where the wife poke to Officer Dillon. After this interruption they continued to Morand's dancing loademy, where they remained until 10 o'clock. They found Kilkenon waiting for hem, and he followed them again, remaining about a half block behind. Just in ront of the Diamond he stepped beside them and Mrs. Klikenon ran from him to Thir-teenth, then to Fourteenth and then back again to the front of the saloon. Kilkenon was in pursuit. She saw the shots fired. topped them and said to his wife: ight. Stella, you can go this time, but ill get you some time when you are alone.

The witness testified further that on las Wednesday afternoon she was with Mrs Kilkenon when Kilkenon was met near Thirteenth and Douglas streets. Kilkenon Mrs. Kilkenon had told her often that her husband was following and threatening her. she had spoken of one occasion when he had rawn a razor upon her. The witness stated that Mrs. Kilkenon had complained several times to the police regarding her husband and she accampanied her once. The wife was advised to swear out a complaint.

SENT NOTES TO HIS WIFE. Earl Lumbeck an American District tele graph messenger boy, said that lately he had carried a half-dozen notes from Kilkenon to his wife at the Arcade hotel, and other the first note and answered it, but refused to accept or receipt for the others. nessenger identified a couple of notes which he had carried. They asked for an appointment at Fifteenth and Douglas streets, and upon the back of them the woman agreed to the meeting. These notes and others were the only things found on the dead man's person, with the exception of the revolver and a big bottle of whisky, both of which were offered in evidence. The of which were offered in evidence. The messenger boy also testified that on the last occasion he carried a note between husband and wife the latter had refused it, and when he informed Kilkenon of this he

'Well, I'll send her a box of flowers and Well, In send her a box of newes and tell her to go to h-1."
Oslas Rubinstein, a weinerwurst peddler, who was standing at Fourteenth and Douglehs streets, was another eyewitness of the shooting. He was conversing with a couple of men when the woman rushed between these with Kilkenon in nursuit. Kilkenon hein with Kilkenon in pursuit. Kilkenon had a revolver in his hand.
"Why didn't you try to stop him?" was

"I didn't haf no time," answered Rubin-stein; "I vuz fraid he might shut me. 1

The woman rushed east on Douglas again with the man in pursuit. Rubinstein followed, trying to catch the latter's coat talls, but he did not catch up. After shooting the woman Kilkenon bent over her a few seconds, then raised the revolver to his own head and fired. John Oliver of 2018 South Seventh street had just stepped out of the Nebraska Music hall with a woman when Kilkenon and the woman rushed up. He saw the man fire and the woman dropped at his feet. Klikenon leaned over her and said: "I told you I would get you." He then killed himself. Oliver was not four feet away from the principals, but he explained:

"I was so geart that I couldn't move out of my tracke." COUPLE WERE DIVORCED.

Offices Russell corroborated the testimony given and J. C. Collins, a brother of the wounded woman, was called as the last witness. He lives at 1717½ Burt street. He said that he had known Kilkenon for eighteen or twenty years. Kilkenon married his sister about twenty years ago. He was 48 years old and his wife 45 at the time of the tragedy. They lived together until 1891, when the woman obtained a divorce from him on account of drunkenness and cruelty. After the divorce they lived together again, residing at 1127 North Twenty-seventh street, but separated again six months ago. Drunkenness on the man's part was again the cause. The witness did not know whether they met thereafter, but the coroner has evidence that they did meet on several occusions and went to a room. The woman complained to the witness of her husband's threats and he swore that he saw him attempt to pull a revolver upon her some time ago at a dance in Washington hall. The wit-ness believed that the cause of the deed was jealousy rather than a desire to get posses-sion of the children. The latter are six in number, the smaller ones residing with the woman's parents in lowa.

Collins testified that early on the evening of the tragedy he saw Kilkenon at his Burt street residence. Kilkenon was intext-cated. The witness said he was frequently in that condition. Kilkenon threatened to do him harm if he did not induce the woman to meet him. He said he intended to kill her, but Collins thought nothing of the GRANT AND SHERMAN AT ST. JOE.

An Unpublished Incident of Johnson's "Swing Around the Circle." In the fall of 1868 President Andrew Johnson on his political tour "around the circle" had for his companions General Grant and General Sherman. It is a matter of history that the trip became so exceedingly disagreeable to both of these distinguished soldiers that they abandoned it, and, if mem ory serves me right, left the presidential party and started east via St. Louis.

The route lay down the river on the ther only railroad, the Mirsonri Valley, which brought them to St. Joseph, Mo., in the early evening. At that time St. Joseph was a hotbed of disloyalty. It was reconstruction days, and there was much antagonism between union men, union sympathizers and the old families who generally represented the disloyal element.

Undoubtedly, in consequence of a large portion of the population being of disloyal tendencies, the visit of Grant and Sherman was not relished. When the train arrived at the station it was met by a mob who followed the carriage, making their presence extremely obnoxious by the blowing of tin horns, by hooting and it was said at that time that they used unsavory eggs.

I recall the circumstances readily, being at that time a guest at the old Pacific hotel soon after destroyed by fire), and not only beard. but saw the mob and deeply re sented their misconduct and insults. It was reported that the mob was led by a local merchant, at that time notorious as a rebel sympathizer. Soon after the arrival of the party at the hotel I attempted to go to my room, but was restrained by the guard a the foot of the stairs until the landlord interfered and requested that I might be

In the broad hall at the head of the stair case, and in front of the pariors, a tall, grizzled soldierly man was impatiently pacing. Except himself (General Grant being alone in the parlor) there was no one in sight. Almost immediately the general was Sherman, spoke and we up and down the hallway, he restless, angry mpatient, and talking constantly.

The toots of horns and the howls of the mob could be plainly heard. Finally the general, with resentment rising at each sound coming in at the open windows turned to me and said with great emphasis 'G-d d-n those devils, we whipped then once; d-n it, we can do it again if neces sary.

The general was extremely angry. We continued up and down the hall, he with pulck, restless strides, talking rapidly. he resented the indignity. Soon a friend came and asked if I had been presented to General Grant. We went to the parlor and found General Grant standing in the center of the room; a few citizens who had come up in the meantime were paying their re spects. I was introuced and shook the hand of the "Silent General." The room soon commenced to fill, so I therefore, retired arly. Although I saw General Sherman umber of times while he resided in Nev York, and was tempted to tax his wonderful nemory for faces and incidents, I had no favorable opportunity without seeming to ntrude upon him. FRED SLY GOES TO JAIL AGAIN. Twenty Days on Account of a Hotel

Escapade. Friday the police renewed their ac quaintance with Fred Sly. The acquaint ance will be kept up for the next twenty days, for yesterday morning Sly was sen tenced for that length of time in the county jail by Police Judge Gordon for a little escapade at the Union hotel Friday.

Sly was a guest at the hotel and while there cultivated an attraction for Alvina Wilcox, a chambermaid, whom he had met in the Lincoln jail, where the girl, a niece of the jailer, used to live. Yesterday Sly entered a room in which the girl was working, and saying that he wished a few minutes private conversation with her, locked the door. The girl's expostulations attracted the attention of another employed of the hotel, Larry S. Diermert. Of course every one, or nearly every one, who goes voyaging to far countries nowadays are constantly saying. Don't do that, do takes a camera with him, and brings back this." I say do it your own way, making that way the best you know, and I'll wara pictorial note book or photographic sketch book of his wanderings through strange countries, and of the peoples and sights he has seen. Nothing that he can bring home will be a source of greater pleasure to him than these photographic notes. Whatever their shortcomings may be, they will carry him back to the scence of his wanderings as no other trophies or written notes could do, and when he is telling his "Tales of a Traveler" the pages of his photographic note book will be a priceless boon both to recounter and auditors. Not every one can make this sort of a note book.

Many are prevented from going beyond scas by reason of business cares or by lack of the wherewithal, and many of us are never able to cross more than half of our own country. But who does not now and then take a short journey if of but an afternoon's duration? And he who will take his camera for notes along the way on his little trips and on the life journey which these little trips help to make up and uses it as much judgment as possible will find himself in time the possessor of a photographic note book or series of note books which money could not buy, as they could not be replaced. WHAT MONEY CANNOT BUY, photographer of the Coliseum in Rome the Niagara Falls of America or any othe noted place can be purchased at any picture store; but where can one buy a photograph of the quiet pool under the willows where he learned to swim, or of the "old oaken bucket" from which he slaked his thirst that hot day in the country? Who is there among us who cannot see pictures with his mind's eye, for a negative of which he would gladly exchange dozens of those he has? Who that owns a camera does not wish he had owned it years before when the haunts of his boyhood, the familiar places of his young manhood, that are so changed or so far away now, could have been so easily taken? The view from one's window may seem very commonplace now, but when the new street has been cut through, or the old buildings that were so familiar have given place to something new, or he leaves those haunts and moves to a distant city he would be glad to have a print of them. And when the woods wherein he gatheted walnuts have been surveyed, platted and recorded into an addition to the city, or a street or railway has been biult across the place where the boys used to skate, negatives of those places would be numbered among his treasures. What Runnymede and Stratford are to the English race what Plymouth Rock and Bunker Hill are to our branch of it some spots on this planet are to every member thereof. The place or building that association has hallowed for the individual s usually one for which the world at large ares too little to insure its preservation of epresentation on paper or canvas, and each one of us must attend to his own sacred spots if he would have visual memories of them.

USELESS TO BEWAIL. It is as useless to bewait lost opportunities as spilled milk, they are gone and come not back to us, but perhaps the remembrance of them may help us to recognize and improve the opportunities of the present ere they have slipped away to join the lost ones of the past and increase the long series of mental pictures that tantalize every camerist because they can never be anything else to him. Let us not neglect picture making, for by that we may make ourselves artists instead of artisans, and neither let us neglect, while the oppor-tunity is afforded, to make brief records of some of the homely things that surround us, some of the familiar scenes that are accessible today, but may be so unattainable tomorrow, and that twenty years hence we would like to see, or to have our children see, as they are today.

We often hear an amateur photographer say after witnessing good work done by others that he would like to do the same, but where is he to find the "subject?" Who wants you to find the "subject." Mr. Amateur? It is already found. What use is there what has already been done? Why not go into the field and make something new, something original? You do not gain anything by always copying what some else has done. To make a good picture requires some thought of your own. Some times it takes many plates on the same subject to get the desired result, and such result is obtained only by working. Do not

LORD OF COMFORT

The English philosopher tells us that whose has sixpence is sovereign over all the world to the extent of that sixpence. In the same way the owner of this Chamber Set is sovereign over Comfort to the extent of one Chamber Set. There are three pieces in the set. The hogany, and looks two hundred years old. This idea of age is heighthened by the design itself. The tail fluted posts are the headmarks of an architecture that was old-fashioned a century ago. These some tapering posts are on the headboard and footboard of the bed, and on the back of the washstand. There is also a fluted section in the front posts of the bureau. The great popularity of this design has
