INDICATIONS OF BETTER TIMES. At this season of the year buyers repre-senting a good many lines of business are accustomed to spend a week or two in the east, making selections of stocks. Some of these buyers, who have already made the trip, bring back reports that are well cal-culated to increase confidence in Omana as a business center. All these reports agree that business operations in the east are dull without exception and that even the retail trade in castern chies, where money is supposed to be plentiful, is very quiet, Eastern retail merchants are com-plaining of dull time just as hard as are western merchants, and failures are by no means infrequent. No one city appears to have a monopoly of hard times and it is a notsworthy fact

兩

No one city appears to have a monopoly thard times and it is a noteworthy fact at every Omaha business man who spends a week or two in the east returns better satisfied with his own city.

Print Cloths Market.

Print Cloths Market. FALL RIVER, Mass. Jan. 16.—The print cloths market has assumed a firmer tone, owing to un-manally large sales and heavy deliveries during the week. The stock has been reduced 196,000 pleces. The effect of the week's business has been to make the manufacturers less easer in their talk of a curtailment movement. Some of them have already contracted to furnish odd goods at figures which yield them some return. These threaten to be the means of preventing any general agreement to curtail production.

The hog market of the past week experienced one the ship Eaton Hall, 183 days from The hog market of the past week experienced a good many ups and downs and values were not stendy for any two days in succession. The week opened at a decline and the market ad-vanced billoc on Tuesday, but the gain was lost on Wednesday. On Thursday values advanced be, and 5c was added on Friday, which was the high day of the week. The decline at the close of the week left values 19615c higher than they were at the opening of the week. The demand was good all the week and the arrivals sold freely at current prices. which, for some time past, has been character-latic in Wall street. The broad considerations able as to outweigh in the judgment of specula-tors and investors, some ordinarily depressing influences. The defeat of the Union Pacific fund-ing bill caused a sharp decline in the stock, and discussion of frequent varying reports and runners as to the probable action that might be taken by the soveriment for the protection of the lien on the property, excited widespread interest, ow-ing to the magnitude of the interest, involved. The security holders were reassured, however, by the formation of a powerful syndicate, which has subscribed $40,000,000 for the purpose of at-tempting a settlement with the government, and impartant developments, including the institu-tion of proceedings for the foreclosure of the property are believed to be imminent. The enormous accumulation of idle money at time tated a steadily increasing demand for prime in-ventent bonds and stocks for both domestic and forelan account, and this is usually the legiti-mate prelude to a strong and active speculation in the general market. This favorable influence was, however, completely overshadowed in secmate prelude to a strong and active speculation in the general market. This favorable influences was, however, completely overshadowed in serv-timental effect by the extraordinarily interna-dunal trade situation of the United States, as illustrated in government statistics of exports and imports.
