Two Young Men from Omaha Are Missionaries in that Country.

LETTER RECEIVED FROM EDGAR M. WILSON

Climatic Conditions Prevent the Storing of Grain and Length of Time Story of the Present Plague.

A number of Omahans are peculiarly interested in the news of the fearful famine and terrible ravages of the plague at Bombay, India...

Among other things the letter states that up to that time the writer had seen but few cases of actual starvation, though the famine was such as to cause great want...

At that time, the middle of December, the bubonic plague had broken out and was spreading rapidly...

As yet the much dreaded disease has confined its work to Bombay, and thus far its victims number less than 100 a day...

This disorder is marked by a sudden attack of high fever, the patient's temperature rising to 105 degrees, or even higher...

The most powerful of the various influences that promote the spread of the plague is uncleanliness. It invariably breaks out in those quarters of a city where the dwelling houses are overcrowded...

GRAVE ROBBERING A CRIME

Parpart of a Bill Introduced in the State Legislature.

MEDICAL COLLEGES ENDORSE THE BILL

Their Needs Are Supplied Through Lawful Means, and They Do Not Countenance the Desecration of the Grave.

"There is an attempt now being made in the state legislature to make grave robbing a felony instead of a misdemeanor," said a prominent surgeon connected with the Omaha Medical college a few days ago...

"Regularly at least once a year the whole community is thrown into a fever of excitement by the announcement that some scoundrel has robbed, or has attempted to rob, the family burial plot of its dead. The finger of suspicion at once points to the black-robed and hooded figures of the grave robbers...

EARLY DAYS

Say! Are you old enough to remember, way back in the sixties, when Omaha was only a muddy spot on the road where Indians camped and straggling settlers vacated their prairie schooners for an hour or two to stretch their limbs and break the monotony of the long, tiresome journey to the unknown beyond?

They were trying times. Brave men and loving wives suffered hardships silently and bore privations bravely, for the future was precarious and dollars were scarcer than hen's teeth. Those were the days when Prince Alberts were not fashionable on the prairies and men covered their manly bosoms with good, old-fashioned, home-made shirts. They weren't very stylish. They weren't 'perfect fitting.' They had no monograms worked on them but they were of good material, they were sewed thoroughly, they were honest and they wore. Maybe you heard your father tell how they wore. We are today doing for people what the woman did for the early settlers—making them good shirts, shirts that will wear. Every shirt sold by The Nebraska whether a working shirt, a dress shirt, a plain shirt or a fancy shirt is as full of service as honest work and honest goods can make it and you don't have to pay a good stiff price to get a good stiff shirt. Half a dollar will buy an unlaundered white shirt that is cut right, made right, bought right and sold right and honest from collar to tail.

Maybe you heard your father tell how they wore. We are today doing for people what the woman did for the early settlers—making them good shirts, shirts that will wear. Every shirt sold by The Nebraska whether a working shirt, a dress shirt, a plain shirt or a fancy shirt is as full of service as honest work and honest goods can make it and you don't have to pay a good stiff price to get a good stiff shirt. Half a dollar will buy an unlaundered white shirt that is cut right, made right, bought right and sold right and honest from collar to tail.

They were trying times. Brave men and loving wives suffered hardships silently and bore privations bravely, for the future was precarious and dollars were scarcer than hen's teeth. Those were the days when Prince Alberts were not fashionable on the prairies and men covered their manly bosoms with good, old-fashioned, home-made shirts. They weren't very stylish. They weren't 'perfect fitting.' They had no monograms worked on them but they were of good material, they were sewed thoroughly, they were honest and they wore. Maybe you heard your father tell how they wore. We are today doing for people what the woman did for the early settlers—making them good shirts, shirts that will wear. Every shirt sold by The Nebraska whether a working shirt, a dress shirt, a plain shirt or a fancy shirt is as full of service as honest work and honest goods can make it and you don't have to pay a good stiff price to get a good stiff shirt.
