the Association Guther Together

to Talk of the Past and Plan for the Future.

The Omaha Retailers' association has just

assed the first anniversary of its birth.

To properly celebrate the occasion an open neeting and a banquet were held last even-ng in the rooms of the Commercial club.

In every respect the affair was a success,

The attendance was upwards of 100. The neeting was enthusiastic. The banquet consisted of a splendid menu and had the advantage of being well served and in the feast of reason that followed, lots of wholesome advice on subjects akin to the betterment of

The secretary's report, reviewing the work of the year, was then read by C. D. Thompson. It follows:

The Omaha Retailers' association held its initial meeting in the Commercial club rooms January 22, 1896. This meeting was presided over by Major Wilcox, A. Hospe, ir., acting as secretary. A: a subsequent meeting A. Hospe was chosen president; T. P. Cartwright, vice president; H. A. Thompson, treasurer, and C. D. Thompson, secretary, and a regular constitution and by-laws adopted.

The organization of this association was not the result of accident, but rather the direct outcome of a demand for an organization which would represent the interests of the retail merchants of Omaha. It was not at first, and has not been since, the intention of the Omaha-Retailers' association to disparage or supplant the work of any other club or organization. The first intention was to organize as a retailers' intention was to organize as a retailers' bureau of the Commercial club. This sile. any other club or organization. of the insurance men themselves, it soon became apparent that the Omaha Retailers' association was, as the newspaper men say, "filling a long felt want." A committee was appointed to take charge of the work and the fullest discussion of both sides of the question invited in open meeting.

After an heroic effort, extending over several months, the work was crowned with success, and a reduction of 5 per cent all over the city of Omaha was secured and several thousand dollars saved to the property owners of Omaha. I do not think it will arouse any feelings of jealousy if I refer at this time in words of commendation to the members of the insurance committee of this association. Their painstakings of the fire insurance business as carried on in Omaha was so thorough and their conception of the whole matter so intelligent as to command the respect and confidence of both the insurer and the insured.

It is owing to the indefatigable work done by these gentlemen that success has been achieved in this direction. Whether the Retailers' association was the originator of this movement to secure a lower rate for writing fire insurance or not, to it belongs the credit of the present reduction in rates and the almost certain prospect of more to follow.

The point of attack was determined upon and one of the largest and most powerful petitions ever secured in Omaha forwarded to the powers that be. Although the union depot asked for has not yet materialized, the same road has seen fit to promize this city a depot which will be a credit to the city and afford ample accommodations to the traveling public.

ledger, and with the satisfaction of having demonstrated by actual achievement its right to exist.

We desire to thank the following firms for kindnesses extended to this association: Hence & Co. and Allen Bros., for a supply of mest excellent clears with a popular name; Paxton & Galingher, for hard tack and cheese; McCord & Brady, for the cup that cheers, but does not inebriate—the coffee that is fit for the gods. Mr. Thomas Frey—may his shadow never grow less—enabled us to have oysters in our consomme, and it is to the gential Dan Farrell that we owe our good fortune in having preserves with our bread and butter to-night. The Haarman Pickie company gave us the appetizing pickies which sharpen your appetites for those sandwiches which came so Swift-ly from a popular packing house, and the firm ronst from the Hammond Packing company, while Messrs Krug and Metz furnished the amber fluid which the best of folks take for their stomachs' sake. To all of these gentlemen we return our thanks for the courtesies extended.

The members of this association, in common with all loyal citizens of Omaha, took a most active part in securing stock subscriptions to the Transmissispip Exposition. In this work, and in every kindred enterprise, the members of this association have shown a willingness and an energy which is most commendable, and which can be boasted of by few organizations in this or any other city.

The association is at present engaged in an endeavor to secure better collection laws for Nebraska. This organization has taken an active part in the promotion of the Nebraska state fair, the fall festivities, the June races, the exposition, and, indeed, any and all enterprises for the good of this city. Body of Christian Hertz Stolen from Ity Grave.

ALLEGED DREAM AND ITS FULFILLMENT

Examination of the Grave in Springwell Cemetery Discloses the Fact that Only the Coffin

and Clothes Remain.

Joseph Dunn, a young man employed at the Model restaurant, near Sixteenth and Howard streets, was visited by a nightmare on the night of January 1, which, if true, has had a strange fulfillment.

Dunn was the intimate friend of Christian Hertz, a young German, who committed suicide at the house where they both roomed, 838 South Nineteenth. Among the letters left by the deceased was one which requested that his body be turned over to a medical college. Despite this request, the remains of Hertz were given to the Danish protherhood, and with appropriate cerenonles, were buried in the association cemetary at Springwell, out on the Military road. The death of Hertz left such a profound impression upon Dunn's mind that he was continually haunted by the memory of his lost friend's face and three nights thereafter he was visited by a most realistic dream. From out of the shadowland pictured by his mind he saw the grave of his dead com-rade in the cometery. The grave was still rade in the cometery. The grave was still damp from the fresh earth which had been turned upon it and the flowers deposited upon the mound bloomed forth as if just placed there. As he looked a wagon con-taining two men drove up. One was an taining two men drove up. One was an elderly man muffled in an overcoat and had a growth of black whiskers. The other was much younger and of light complexion. The two men took from the wagons two shovels and a pick axe. They worked steadshovels and a pick axe. They worked steadily at the grave and at length one of them disappeared from sight and a moment later appeared with the corpse of Hertz. The body was stripped of its burial clothes and wrapped in an olicloth blanket, it was placed in the wagon and the two drove off.

The mind of Dunn, even in the dream, was concentrated upon the act of the robber to

The chief operator was this person, and he appeared to have charge of a class to whom he was demonstrating some physiological problem as he worked upon the remains. Horrified at the spectacle of his friend's mutilation the dreamer awoke, but so strongly was the scene imprinted upon his memory that he told several friends about it the next day.
