

EXPOSITION AT NASHVILLE

Tennessee's Centennial Display is Now Open to the Public.

CROWDS WITNESS OPENING EXERCISES

Imposing Procession Precedes the Formal Program—History and Description of the Great Enterprise.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., May 1.—The Tennessee Centennial Exposition was opened at noon today with appropriate ceremonies in the presence of many thousands of people.

The weather was bright and cool, and in an hour the great throngs of people assembled to witness the parade of the Exposition order and other societies.

Arriving at the exposition grounds these in the procession joined with the thousands of other visitors who are daily flocking to the buildings, and the very attractive grounds.

The Tennessee Centennial exposition has been opened to the world, and the first day of May, 1897, will be forever memorable in the annals of Tennessee.

The history of the state, when it is written, will contain no brighter page than the record of this last achievement. It is worthy of a great people and reflects credit upon the whole nation.

STORY OF THE EXPOSITION. The idea of celebrating the centennial anniversary of the state was first suggested about six years ago by newspaper communications, but nothing seemed to grow out of anything that was then said.

The women of Tennessee have played no mean part in the necessary work of making ready for the coming of the Exposition.

The opening ceremonies were so simple and so plain that they will be in perfect harmony with the method of the Exposition.

this year, because of the growing importance of the exposition, and the impossibility of the postponement every week has added to the immensity of the undertaking.

The number of main buildings has doubled, and the number of exhibits has been increased to the press of the country has never flagged, and the work of the Bureau of Publicity and Information has been heavy in supplying the information which the leading papers of the country required for the multifold articles which they have printed from time to time.

The last session of the legislature appropriated $50,000, and congress, after seeing the extent of the success already attained, building a new installation of exhibits.

At Nashville, standing on the Riohio, a counterpart of a narrow strait between two lovely lakes, and looking directly west, the first object that the eye rests upon in the colossal building is the dome of the Parthenon.

The principal buildings are as follows: First, the Parthenon, a temple dedicated and completed by Phidias at Athens; the Erechtheion, or History building, will be the depository of valuable relics; the Commercial building, known as the World's Fair in exposition parlance as the Manufactures and Liberal Arts building; the Education and Hygiene building; the Transportation building; Negro building; Machinery, Government building; the Woman's building, Minerals and Forestry, and others of lesser note, nearly fifty in all.

The Machinery building is considered one of the finest specimens of pure Greek architecture in the world. It is a temple of some 200 feet in length, and somewhat resembles the Propylaeum in Munich. The Commerce building measures 30x250 feet and its general style is that of the Erechtheion, and the Parthenon.

The Music building is a most interesting structure and was erected by funds collected from the children of the state. The building is justly considered one of the most attractive in the exposition group and has a commanding position on the east side of the grounds.

The women of Tennessee have played no mean part in the necessary work of making ready for the coming of the Exposition. The "Woman" department by placing Mrs. Van Leer Kirkman, a sweet, womanly woman and a famous beauty, at the helm as president.

the Al-Abraham that they might find this great commonwealth. They loved the banner of our country, with its little cluster of fifteen stars, and the 400 years of its history.

Loud and continuous cheering followed the conclusion of the exercises. The Star Spangled Banner, amid tumultuous cheering and waving of hats and handkerchiefs.

Ladies and Gentlemen: The first century in the history of the commonwealth of Tennessee, glorious with the deeds of heroes and rich with achievements in all the arts of peace, has gathered to this city.

The "Mirror," or water amphitheater, which will terminate the lagoon at the west end of the Kountze tract, is, as the name implies, intended to repeat by reflection a very beautiful peristyle, whose double colonnade encircles this end of the lake almost at the water's edge.

and Bell and Tesla and Edison open up new highways for the march of civilization. I see the vast wilderness of America, the "domain of the unknown," yielding to the brain and progress of the American people.

When order was restored, or rather when quietude more resumed, the Rev. Lewis R. Porter, the director general of the association, under whose skillful guidance the marvellous project materialized and did so the volume of applause shook the very firmament, and it was at once seen that Tennessee had looked up to the work of her great statesman.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—In compliance with the request of the executive committee of the Tennessee centennial, the president of the exposition, Lewis R. Porter, today opened the exposition grounds at Nashville, Tenn., at 1:12 o'clock today.
