GRAND ARMY SERV.CES AT HANSOOM PARK

Rain and Clouds Keep Attendance of Visitors to a Minimum, but the Exercises None the Less Impressive.

After corelderable doubt throughout the morning as to the expediency of having the the city out to Hanse; m park the sun peered through the clouds shortly after 1 o'clock, and itself settled the mooted question. Or ders were given to the companies that had been invited to participate to form at Sixteenth and Farnam streets, and the procession started on its march to the park at a few minutes past 2 o'clock.

There was a goodly concourse of people all along Sixteenth street from Harney street up to Dodge, the number of spectators greatly exceeding the number of participants in the parade. The force of the latter had been reduced by the uncertainty concerning the actual starting of the parade and by as would cause consternation to the most the threatening weather which continued up powerful enemy. I have no fear on this until moon. Though the procession was some-score. I have no patience with the croakers what shorter than usual it lacked in no other element except quantity. The uniforms were bright and showy, the display of American and company flags was brilliant and all the soldiers marched well.

W. S. Askwith acted as marshal of the roccession, and, mounted on a fine brown orse, led the way to Hanscom park over this route, starting from the corner of Sixteenth and Farnam streets: South on Sixteenth street to Harney, west on Harney to Twenty-eighth street, south on Twenty-eighth street to Poppleton avenue, and west on Poppleton avenue to the park. Following Marshal Ask avenue to the park. Following Marshal Ask-with came the band from Fort Crook, the music of the Twenty-second regiment of the government's regulars. This fine band, play-ing spirited martial airs, preceded two comparies composed of soldiers from Fort Crook. They were: Garrison II Army and No. They were: Garrison II, Army and Navy union, Commander Blau, and Nelson A. Miles division of the Army and Navy Veterans, Commander Chapuis. The representatives of the regular army presented a fine appearance and were cheered along the line of march.
Immediately following the troops from Fort Crook came a cirriage containing the speakers of the afternoon.

CITIZEN SOLDIERY IN LINE. Following came the Saventh Ward band, under the command of Leader George Green. In their brilliant uniforms these musicians attracted much attention. They were followed by the Thurston Rifles, under the command of First Lieutenant Hayward and Sec ond Lieutenant Stockham. Almost the whole company turned out, and its appearance showed the effect of the drilling preparatory to the trip to San Antonio to defend the Galveston cup. The Omaha Guards followed, Captain Mulford in command, with Lieutenants Wilson and Cone, marching in the com-pany's usual good style.

Next came a company of the High school cadets composed of the members of various companies of the High school battalion. The cadets were in charge of Captain J. R. Holmes, and made a good showing, even if they had no guns to carry. The Continental Fife and Drum corps followed, under the leadership of Charles Rhodes. The Frank E. Moores camp. No. 21 Sons of Veterans ununiformed but bearing an immense Amer ican flag and other forms of the national col ors, brought up the end of the procession. This company was under the command of Captain Samuel Wiggins, On reaching the northeast corner of Hanscom park the column was joined by the va-rious Grand Army posts of the city. The entire procession then moved to the grave of the unknown dead, where the afternoon's memorial exercises were held, under the direction of Charles E. Burmester, officer of the

The services at Hanscom park commences shortly before 3 o'clock. They were attended by a crowd of somewhat over 500 men, women children, the latter being represented by quite a working quorum. The spectator, were not nearly so numerous as for severa years past, but they came out in larger num bers than the Grand Army people had ex pected when the clouds were lowering. Al the local posts of the Grand Army of the Re-public, Woman's Relief corps, Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic and Sons of terans were represented. A great number of children were there, and even the dog forgot to notice the signs at the entrance forbidding them admission. There wer bicyclers, equestrians, and the rich who rode in chaises, but the poor who walked in the pathways were in the majority.

Following the lead of the soldiers and the column that had marched out from the city the crowd quickly gathered about the grave dedicated to the unknown dead of the war the rebellion. With the old soldiers forming a quadrangle about the significant grave and spectators ranged in rows, some standing and the more venturesome sitting on the grassy banks above them, the ritual services

C. E. Burmester eloquently delivered th address in general use among the Grand Army posts. This was followed by a novel and most picturesque act. Forty-five young girls, representing the states of the union articipated in an exercise that consisted of the recitation of an appropriate verse with the strewing of flowers upon the grave of the unknown dead by each one. The little girls were uniformly attired and presented an at-tractive appearance. They were gowns of white, with white caps ornamented with blubands, white sashes with red borders containing the names of the states, and each in one hand a small American flag and in the other a bouquet of flowers to place

SALUTE IS FIRED. There was a dirge by the same little girls, followed by three volleys by the Thurston Rifles. The firing of this salute caused some consternation among the women and children, over whose heads it was fired, but beyond a few soiled collars and blackened faces to harm was done. The names of the soldiers who had died since the last Memo-rial day were then read. The taps were rial day were then read. The taps were sounded, there was prayer by Dr. Mackay and then all wended their way toward the speakers' stand, where the remainder of VETERANS HONOR THE DEAD His address was listened to with rapt attention, and his allusions to the ties of fraternity formed during the war aroused the tenderest feelings of the old soldiers, so that when he had finished speaking there was scarce a dry eye in front of him.

In part he spoke as follows: "We are very glad that we have with us today our commander-in-chief and so many other soldiers with whom we touched shoulder dur-ing the war. This is no ordinary occasion. It is the day on which we commemorate the deeds of those who fell in defense of their country and of those who have followed them. It is an occasion to illustrate the loyal patriotism and the fealty of the people of this country to the grand old flag and to the principles of patriotism for which so many thousands of our comrades died. It's many thousands of our comrades died. It's very easy to talk patriotism. It's quite another thing to personify it by standing in the ranks amidst the terrible carnage of war. We first learned patriotism in the schools, Memorial day procession from the center of where we also learned the principles of this vernment. It was not until we enlisted and went down to the southland and conquered it in the name of our country and its flag, causing it to surrender to the grandest commander the world has ever seen, that we appreciated the full meaning of patrio-

> PATRIOTISM STILL LIVES. After describing the outbreak of the war ts progress through four years, and recalsome of the innumerable sad incidents of period, the speaker said: "There are that period, the speaker said: just as brave men and youths in our fair land today as there were then. If occasion should require they would rise up in tre mendous might and in twenty-four hours there would be marching such a great army who are ever bewailing what might happen to this country in time of war. The country was worth saving then. It is worth saving now, and it will be saved. In 1861 we had as many citizen soldiery as we had citizens in the days of George Washington. What a grand army of citizen soldiery we could raise today, after we have progressed so rapidly since the close of the war!" Rev. Mr. Britt dwelt at length on the value of the friendship with comrades formed during the war, membership in the same regiment being sufficient to weld the strongest ties. He recalled an incident of Friday last when, while returning from the decoration of the graves, he met by accident a member of his regiment. He also said that a short time ago he had found the drummer of his old regiment playing a snare drum down in a Kansas town. He knew him by the way he beat that drum.

While he was speaking an old soldier who had listened to these remarks on the ties of comrades, suddenly recognized in the speaker a comrade whom he had not seen fo thirteen years, and immediately after the exercises there was another occasion for re-joicing at the reunion of two old soldiers of the same regiment.

CALL FOR MANDERSON. Commander-in-Chief Clarkson made a few emarks on the importance of the continued elebration of the day by the rising generation, and the benediction was pronounced by Rev. T. J. Mackay.

Then followed an unusual happening. In stead of dispersing the old soldiers remained in their seats and from all corners of the stand simultaneously called for Comrade Manderson. He shook his head and started away, but the old soldiers wouldn't have it that way. Finally the genial general was compelled to step to the front and make a few remarks. In part he said: "My dear comrades, I regret very much that you have acted in this way, for I fear that you show an almost total ignorance of the forms of Christian worship by not dispersing after the benediction has been pronounced. It is usual in Christian gatherings for the people o go out after that part of the service has

"Since the world began there has never been anything akin to these annual cele-brations. If there could be any appropriate accompaniment to the deeds of the brave men who were the blue it is in these memorial day exercises, first suggested by that noble citizen and comrade, John A. Logan. With the swell of music, with bright flowers and with a spirit of rever-ence for the occasion let us come to each o these occasions while we may live to celebrate the deeds of those who fell, thereby inculcating a firm love of country amongs

Ross and Mary Vinsek Do a Shoplift

Rosa and Mary Vlasek, two sisters abou 18 years of age, were each fined $50 and costs in police court yesterday on the charge of shoplifting. Evidence is in the possession of the authorities to indicate that the two girls intended to inaugurate an extensive campaign of thievery.

The family of the two girls resides in the western part of the state. The young women came to this city some months ago to seek employment. Mary secured a posi-tion in the family of John Hart, in Dundee Place. Rosa was employed as a domestic in a family residing at Twentieth street and St. Mary's avenue. Last Saturday evening the two girls visited the Boston store and stole goods valued at $50. They took them to Rosa's place of employment and secreted them in a patch of weeds in the rear of the house. Then the girls returned to the Boston store and stole two valuable capes. They were about to get away with these when Special Officer Keysor placed them under arrest

All the stolen goods was recovered and in addition a quantity that had been taken by Mary from her employer. The latter were found stowed away in Rosa's trunk. The value of this property was about $25. After their arrest the girls stated that they intended to ship the goods away and sell The girls at first tried to bluff.

Supervising Architects Secure Many Valuable Points for Use in Omaha.

KIMBALL ON THE TENNESSEE EXPOSITION- plog a 3-year-old child.

Pleased with the Style and Architecture of the Buildings_Walker Confers with Government Authorities on Federal Building.

The supervising architects of the Transnississippi Exposition, Watker & Kimball spent four days of last week in Nashville, visiting the Tennessee Centennial exposition and acquiring information in the line Nashville, via Washington, Mr. Kimball stated yesterday that Mr. Walker took with him to Washington the suggestions of a design which he intended offering to the supervising architect as a means of expediting the work of planning the federal building. A telegram from Mr. Walker vestigation with the supervision of the little one. Mrs. Lawless, however, did not look favorwith him to Washington the suggestions building. A telegram from Mr. Walker yesinterview with the government authorities was a quarrel between Scanlan and had been entirely satisfactory,

Mr. Kimball is very enthusiastic over the He says the promoters have accomptished wonders and have secured an enormous result for the money they have expended. Mr. Kimball was especially delighted with the the Acropolis at Athens, even the marble of which the original was built being reprouced in staff. The charming tint of the old marble, resembling the rich hue of old ivory, has been produced in staff and an exact fac simile of the finest example of the pure Doric order of architecture the world has ever seen stands on a sligh elevation, form ing, as Mr. Kimball says, a study in architecture which inspires every admirer of the beautiful in art and for which the architect, colonel W. C. Smith of Nashville, deserve monument.

The Parthenon shelters the art exhibit of he Tennessee exposition and the interio cella is constructed of brick, making the structure fireproof. The practical feature of this building, from Mr. Kimball's point of view, is the fact that it is a proof that staff Use Horsford's Acid Phosphate. may be given a tint.

It has been the intention of the architect of the Transmississippi Exposition to avoid having the staff white, and thereby having a city of dazzling whiteness, disagreeable to the eyes in more than one way, but just how to accomplish this has been a mooted question. The Chicago people expended thousands of dollars in unsuccessful attempts to stain the staff and experts prowas found to be very expensive, but the result attained in the Parthenon solves the whole difficulty. By the use of yellow ochre and brown in the mixing of the staff an old marble tint was imparted, giving the whole a rich, creamy tint, which, Mr. Kim-whole a rich, creamy tint, which, Mr. Kimball says, is very pleasing to the eye and artistic in the general result.

As a result of this discovery the staff-covered buildings of the Transmississippi Exposition will be given a creamy tint which will add greatly to the richness of the general effect and soften the outlines of the architecture. the architecture.

The skylights of the exposition buildings will be made of a newly invented transucent fabric, which admits a soft amber while not being subject to breakage from the settling of any part of the building or from hall or stones. This fabric is in use at the Nashville exposition and Architect Kimball says it is pronounced very satis-factory by the architects there, WILL BEGIN BUILDING THE SEWERS

Exposition Authorities Order the Work Started at Once.

The executive committee of the Transmisssippi Expesition held a special meeting matters which were not reached at the meeting Friday afternoon. Manager Kirkendall was authorized to once commence the construction of a sewe on the Kountze tract. This is to drain the lagoon and the grounds. The sewer will con-nect with the existing main sewer in Twentyourth street. The connecting section wil be twenty-four inches in diameter and will extend well up the lagoon, ending in a manhole which will serve as an overflow to keep the water in the lagoon from rising bove a certain point and will also allow of the lagoon being drained when the occa-sion requires. Along the south side of the Kountze tract a sewer eighteen inches in diameter will be laid, connecting at the west end with the larger sewer and extending eas about 2,000 feet. This part of the sewer will be of a temporary nature and will be lai in a shallow trench and covered with the earth now being removed from the lagoon by the grading contractor. Another portion of the sewer will be laid along the north side of the Kountze tract. This will probably be fifteen inches or less in diameter, and will also be temporary unless the owners of ad-joining property join in its construction. Superintendent of Construction Geraldine peared before the committee and explained that the work of putting in this sewer was such that it could not be let by contract, and advised that the work be started at once in order to avoid moving the dirt twice which is now being wasted along the sides of the lagoon. He estimated that the entire work would cost less than $5,000. He was structed to secure bids for the material. A number of routine matters were dispose of and several small bills were allowed.

PROSECUTOR AND JUDGE DISAGREE

District Court Must Rule on Lega Meaning of an Ordinance. Inasmuch as City Presecutor Miller and Police Judge Gordon disagree on the definition of the term "disturbing the peace," the judge of the district court is to be called in to settle the difficulty. The point was raised in the case of Stella Green yesterday, when the woman was tried on the charge of disturbing the peace. In his information, the city prosecutor ac-cused the defendant of fracturing the good order of the city by using loud and pro-fane language, by threatening to fight and by using boisterous language. Judge Gor-don decided that the city prosecutor had to elect under which charge he would prosecute. Prosecutor Miller, on the other hand maintaines that all three charges constituted a disturbance, and were named under the same ordinance. He therefore refused to elect. The consequence was that the police judge discharged the defendant. The city prosecutor says that he will file

Last night shortly after 9 o'clock as Oscar Bloyer, messenger boy, was riding his wheel Bloyer, messenger boy, was riding his wheel near Fifteenth and Douglas streets, the front fork of his machine broke and threw him to the pavement. The boy was going at a rapid gait and the fall was hard. He was pleked up in an unconscious condition and taken into a drug store nearby. He was later removed to his home at 1411 North Eighteenth street. Bloyer sustained a badly bruised face and it is thought by the attending physician that he is internally injured.

Jury Could Not Agree.

The jury in the Messersmith burglary case, which has been out since last Friday came in yesterday afternoon with a report that it had been unable to agree. Judge Baker inquired if there was any possibility that a verdict could be reached if he sent them out again, but the foreman assured him that he didn't "see no show at all." and the jury was discharged. Messersmith was released on his bond.

Cool Facts.

We sell a good, well made and well finished sateen coat for 50 cents. That's a cool fact, We sell a fine grade of serge coat, unlined, for one dollar and a quarter. That's another cool fact. Our second floor is full of such cool facts as these, and people who want to keep cool are astonished at the fact that everything they look at is cheaper in price than they ever saw the same quality for elsewhere: Lots of people who come in here to buy a 50 cent coat change their minds and buy the $1.25 serges "because they're so cheap," and lots of people who come in to look at the $1,25 serges buy the $1.50 alpacas 'because they're so cheap." Speaking of alpacas, we want to direct your attention to the cool crash suits made from pure linen (flax) which we are selling for two dollars for coat, pants and vestand speaking of linen crash, you might take a look at the good quality of white duck pants we are selling for 65 cents. They are selling for 98 cents in stores where they sell things so cheap. That's another cool

CITY'S BRIEF IN CHARTER CASE.

Defects, if Any Exist, Held to Be Ensily Remedied. The brief of City Attorney Connell in the ase in which D. H. Wheeler and others seek to contest the validity of the charter was completed late last night and will be forwarded to Lincoln this morning. Mr. Connell went to Lincoln last night to be present when the case is called in the Supreme court this forenoon. The brief is a bulky document, and deals at length with the proposi tions advanced against the constitutionality of the charter.

In the beginning the city attorney calls at tention to the tremendous disaster which a decision at this time against the would bring to the city. He shows that the issue of renewal bonds is absolutely essential to preserve the credit of the city. If the charter which provides for the issue bonds should be defeated it would at one woop destroy the credit of Omaha and leave the maturing indebtedness outstanding and drawing interest charges amounting to $1,000 month.

He considers in detail the question raised by the relators as to the validity of the secions fixing the term of the police judge and quotes voluminous decisions to show that even if the section in question should be adjudged invalid it would not affect the constitutionality of the remainder of the charter. With regard to the allegation that the sec ion relating to the Board of Fire and Police Commissioners involves special legislation he shows that the constitutional prohibition applies solely to private corporations and not to municipal corporations. In regard to the assertion that the charter was invalid be cause it contained provisions which could only relate to Omaha it is indicated that i this was true no charter that Omaha had Gordson gave a good description of the stranger and on the strength of it John Mc-Graw was arrested yesterday. Goodson concludes as follows: "At the most these concludes as follows: "At the most these concludes as follows: "At the most these and the numerous other objections raised by the relators are but fly specks on the walls of the charter for cities of the metropolitan class. If there be any that are not wholly imaginary, such can be removed without tearing down the house."
