' LINCOLN, June 3 .- (Special.) -- Last Tuesday, when the Merchants' bank closed its doors it had on deposit $8,731.85, money helonging to the state, as compared with the $6,418.24 left on deposit there by Mr. Bartley. During the last five months, while there has been so much agitation over the manner in which the state funds have been cared for, the state deposit in the Merchants' bank of Lincoln has been increased, and when the bank was taken in charge by the state bank examiner it contained $2,313.61 more than was deposited there when J. S. Bartley turned the state treasury over to Mr. Meserve were very active in securing signatures for Mr. Meserve's bond last December, and one of the earliest signers was J. W. Fullerton, on the earliest signers was 5. w. Fullerton, son of William Fullerton, president of the bank, and himself connected with the in-stitution. On December 11 J. W. Fullerton made oath before a notary public that he was worth $40,000 above all liabilities and exemptions. A diligent search fails to show that he was worth anywhere near that amount, or that he has in his private bus; ness ever made any pretensions of so much wealth since that time.

The rumor having been circulated that the deposits in the Merchants' bank had been increased since the first of the year, the reporter of The Bee went to the office of the state treasurer today to ascertain the facts. Inquiry was made as to the exact amount money left in the bank by Mr. Bartley. The figures were given out with great reluctance, and as taken down and verified were $8,950.24.

DEPUTY REVERSES HIMSELF.

When asked if any deposits had been made since that time, the treasurer's deputy said that some small checks had been deposited and others drawn on the bank, but that it "was of no consequence," the bank having a triffe of $218.39 less on deposit when it closed than it had on January 1. Thirty minutes later the reporter returned to the treasurer's office and told the deputy that word had been received from Mr. Bartley to the effect that on January 1 there was less than $6,500 state money on deposit in the Merchants' bank. The official seemed much surprised at this, and again turned to the books. This time the statement was made that when Bartley turned the books over to Meserve there was exactly $6,418.24 state money on deposit in the Merchants' bank; that Mr. Bartley's last deposit had been made early in December, and that no fur-ther deposits had been made until after Mr. Meserve had taken charge of the office. No attempt was made to explain the discrep-ancy in the two statements given out.

ancy in the two statements given out. The last bond given by the bank to se-cure the state deposit was approved Feb-ruary 27, 1897. The signatures and the amounts justified for are as follows: R. S. Young, $20,000; J. A. Sheen, $5,000; David Fitzgeraid, $40,000; John C. Fullerton, $20,-000; C. L. Chipman, $5,000; William Fuller-ton, $50,000; William Ryons, $5,000; E. A. Starbars, $10,000; Johns L. Davids $5,000; E. A. Stephens, $10,000; Joseph L. Ryons, $25,000. Of the above Sheen, Young, the Fullertons and Ryons were directly connected with the

The statement is made by a prominent banker of this city that one reason for the gradual withdrawal of money from banks is that the individuals are using their idle money in buying up state warrants, feeling that they will thus be safer than if they allow the money to regain in the banks. For the four menths ending April 30 about $175,000 worth of warrar's were bought up and this represents almost that much withdrawn from the banks of the country. The anxiety to find a safe place to put idle money also explains the rise in the price hotel man for attempting to evade payment of a board bill. Immediately thereafter suits were instituted against them by team-sters, farmers, and their own employes. Attachments were taken out, and the show is now hopelessly stranded. One of the proprietors, Mathews, is an old newspaper man, formerly of O'Neill, Neb.
