

TRUE IDEAL FOR EVERY MAN

Chancellor MacLean Holds it to Be the Formation of Perfect Character.

REQUIRES AN ETERNITY TO DEVELOP IT

Chancellor of the State University Preaches the Baccalaureate Sermon to the Graduates of that Institution.

LINCOLN, June 6.—(Special.)—The baccalaureate sermon to the graduates of 1897 of the University of Nebraska was preached tonight at the Lanning theater.

After the song service the sermon, "Ideals and Life Ruins," was delivered by Chancellor MacLean. He took for his text Isaiah ix, 4, "And they shall raise up the former desolations, and they shall repair the waste cities, the desolations of many generations."

In pursuing his subject, the chancellor said: "When men practically, as well as theoretically, cease to form and live for ideals they are in despair. It is the absence of ideals which constitutes despair."

When no longer hope burns or aspiration kindles in the bosom, one who is a man must die, or plunge into insanity. Webster, dying when he had failed to snatch the bubble of the presidency for which he had lived, is a most striking instance.

"The world is not dreary to the healthy-minded Christian. To be sure it is transient; but it is because we are rushing through it. It appears as in the railway train when the country recedes and apparently flies by us, but it is we who are the travelers, the transients. It is evident the difficulty to us cannot be that the world is passing by, but that we are not one."

"Two eminently successful men of an old time were Ezra and Nehemiah. God gave them exceedingly difficult tasks, full of peril as well as glory, and they accomplished them grandly.
