We need the influence of the organization in favor of temperance, of total abstinence, of the prohibition of the liquor traffic. No home is entirely safe while the evil lurks in any place, and there are evidences that the blight of the saloon is increasing in many places as time passes. More drinking at saloon bars, more arrests for crime, more dan-gers to women and children, increased demoralization and decreased safety to life and moralization and decreased safety to life and character. These things are becoming a source of sorrow daily in cities where the mulct saloon is thriving. In our beautiful capital city they are now daily witnessed where once the doors of the saloon were closed. The battle against the establishment of the legalizations.

of the legalized brewery and distillery is again on our hands. The opposing forces of the anti-cigarette law require our earnest! efforts to create a public sentiment strong enough to maintain, strengthen and enforce it. If we love the Christian Sabbath we need nd against all forms of desc Sunday games of base ball, foot ball, railroad excursions, Sunday business, Sunday papers, etc. There is great need of activity along all lines of educational work that will help to arouse public sentiment to realize the dan-gers existing from these evils as well as that arising from intoxicants.

The report of the financial condition of the Christian home shows that the receipts for the past week have again been below the weekly needs of the institution, making a half dozen weeks in succession when the do-nations to both the general fund and the manager's fund have been decidedly insuffi-cient to meet the expenses of caring for the hundreds of little orphans who are being given a good deal more than a mere home. As a result of his operations here thirty-six farmers complained to the county authorities. He not only stole horses, buggles, wagons, harness, etc., but in numerous in-stances he entered farm houses and at revolver's point held up the occupants for everything they had of value. Finally Cherokee county became too warm to hold him and he skipped. But before going he de-fied Sheriff Wheeler by stealing from him three horses, harness and a buggy. He was next heard of in Arkansas and the Indian territory, where he continued his robberies. Whiteombe reappeared in Iowa about the middle of June and stole all through Plymouth county and parts of Woodbury county. Sheriff Wheeler of Cherokee leatned he had passed into Nebraska. Wheeler came to Sioux City today and, crossing the river, secured the assistance of Sheriff Borowsky of Dakota county. They located Whitcombe in camp on the Winnebago reservation. Whitcomb knew Sheriff Wheeler by sight and it sight while Borowsky attempted the capture. Borowsky came upon the robber sud-denly and covered him with a revolver, "Put up your hands," he commanded.

Whitcombe reached for his pistol pocket and the command was repeated more em-quietly; "but if you don't raise your hands instantly I'll do it." Whitcombe reluctantly obeyed. When Sheriff Wheeler appeared Whitcombe decided he did not want to be captured after all and made a desperate fight for liberty. The combined efforts of four men were required to handcuff him. In Whitcombe's pocket found a large revolver. In his wagon there was a rifle and his pockets were full of cart-ridges. He also had with him the three horses he stole from Sheriff Wheeler.
