TERRIER LOOKED FOR TROUBLE

Put the Whole Zoo in an Uproar, but it Cost Him His Life.

A diminutive wire haired terrier with hatred of peace and a love for trouble found a field for mischief in the Central park zoo Saturday morning, relates the New York World, and had rare sport there for a half hour. But it cost him his life. When he wandered into the zoo he did not eem to know just what to make of the place. Just then the lion roared. The little terrier pricked up his ears, took the road as a challenge and ran into the lion house. The little terrier began to bark in his ercest style. He jumped up against the fiercest style. lion's cage and in other ways indicated his desire to get at that lion and chew him up. Mr. Lion looked amszed for a minute, and then up and down his cage he rushed, try-ing to drown the terrier's snappy bark with his own roaring. The other animals started to roar, and the terrier was just wild with delight at the row that he had raised. Looking for bigger game, the terrier tackled the hippotamus family.

Mr. Hippo, Mrs. Hippo and Miss Hippo were snoozing when the terrier got to their cage. The little rascal picked out Mr. Hippo as his mark. Going right into the cage he sneaked up beside the sleeping monster, took a station alongside the place where he thought the ear ought to be and gave voice went for the terrier and tried to step on him, but he nimbled and kept out of the way. The chase lasted five or ten minutes, way. The chase lasted five or ten minutes. The other animals watched it and roared out encouragement to the hippos. The beam were especially vociferous, so Mr. Terrier went to their cage to have some fun with them. In two minutes the dog had a polar bear, the grizzly, the brown bear and the cina-mon bear all acting like a lot of crazy brutes. In their eagerness to get at the terrier they all tried to climb the same pole or ladder at once, but when one of them would get near him he would scamped off. Matters had reached such a stage and the animals were making such a racket that Secretary Leary of the park department, in his office near by, could not hear himself. think so he sent Keeper Snyder, the share shooter of the zoo, out with his trusty rifle to quell the riot. Snyder found the cause of it all in the little terrier. He tried to call the dog off from the bears, but he was hav-ing too much fun to heed. So Snyder shot
