The collecting of materials for decorating and for exhibits during the early stages of the exposition is one which caused considera-ble discussion among the members of the commission at their meeting this work There was considerable talk about buying the fruits and tertain other materials needed for the purpose, and an estimate was sub-mitted by the bornignituriets as to the probable cost of various kinds to keep the horti-cultural exhibit in good order. The matter of buying corn, wheat and other grains was also discussed but nothing was estiled re-garding this matter. It was programly con-celled that this method would prove entirely too expensive to be practical, but no other method was decided upon.
