

"SHREWSBURY"

By STANLEY J. WEYMAN.

That Smith discerned the chagrin which this... though not the ground of it was as plain as the fact gave him pleasure of the common kind...

How long, with those feelings, I could have borne to go with him, or what I should have done in the last resort had he continued the same tactics, remains unproved...

"Very well," he said. "This way." I fancied that he had suspected nothing, and that perhaps I had been wrong throughout...

"I will wait for you," I muttered, tingling all over with a sudden hope. While he was talking, I could not help but notice...

to be all, is it? Perhaps, my girl, I will presently show you two minds about that. Where is the dagger?" "It is not here," she answered. "Not here," he cried. "No," she answered. "You need not misname me," she answered coolly...

"HERE, FERUGSON!" HERE'S YOUR MAN!

And yet, because of the chance that after all they might go out as they had come, I could so far keep my terror within bounds...

"I am going," I stammered, a desperate hope in my breast at sight of the man's perplexity. He might let me pass. For aught I know he would have done so...
