Every Teacher or Scholar

in the public schools of the United States, 15 years of age and over, should have a copy of the Northern Pacific's new and improved

Geographical and Historical Atlas, 1897. It is especially adapted for use in the public schools in the study of geography and history, and as an aid in the study of the Northwest and its varied and vast resources.

The book has a large amount of valuable data, but is not by any means a compendium of the geographical and historical facts of the beautiful Lake Park region of Minnesota, the Red River Valley of the North, the remarkable great land of the country, and the most varied and varied of thousands of cattle are raised, are described.

Yellowstone park and its wonderful canyons and lakes, waterfalls and geysers has a long chapter given to it.

A chapter on several of the richest mining districts of the northwest, telling how they were discovered and developed will interest every one.

Some of the great snow mountains, old volcanoes on the north Pacific coast have a chapter devoted to them which gives much of their history.

A new mountain range, one almost unknown in the northwest corner of the United States, is brought to the reader's attention. It is a glorious region, with deep, beautiful valleys, full of new varieties of trout, made famous by a rear admiral of the United States navy.

Alaska also has a place in its pages. The booklet has a handsome cover and is beautifully and profusely illustrated.

Every teacher or scholar can have a copy by sending a few cents postage stamps to Charles C. Fee, general passenger agent, St. Paul, Minn.

Here is an opportunity which should not be lost to obtain something of interest and value, almost for nothing, and our schools should reap the benefit of it.

LEMEN TAKES LAUDANUM AND DIES

Despondent He Ends His Trouble by Taking His Life.

Nebraska, and probably a farmer by occupation, committed suicide Friday night in a boarding house at 1016 South Tenth street by taking an overdose of laudanum.

The dead man arrived in this city from Chicago last Thursday night and went directly to the boarding house of Mrs. John Conroy. He was apparently dependent upon his illness, which appears to have been blood poisoning. Before retiring at an early hour Friday night he had taken a dose of laudanum.

"It is terrible to be sick."

The man went to his room with some laudanum. Mrs. Conroy prepared for him and went to bed. He was found dead in a bed yesterday morning. Mrs. Conroy went to his room to summon him. She received no answer and opening the door found Lemmen lying dressed on the bed. He was dead.

An examination of the room brought out evidence that full doses of the drug had been administered. Upon a stand was found a cork on one side of which the deceased had written his name and address. On the other side of the cork was a request that his body be forwarded to a brother-in-law, John S. Hughes, who lives at Marsland, Neb. Upon the cork was also written the name of a physician, which contained laudanum. The drug had been purchased at a neighboring drug store. When he bought it the deceased said he intended to use it for a toothache.

marked: "It is most mortifying for Americans traveling abroad to find that we have erected a barrier against trade with foreign nations which provokes the ill will of nations which should be most friendly."

Continental traveling this summer has been the worst for many seasons past and there has been quite a panic among the traveling public of Austria in consequence of the frequent railroad disasters and the continued robbery of passengers on through expresses. During the last five weeks there have been fifteen accidents on Austrian railroads. Belgium, Sweden and Denmark have been infested by large gangs of expert railroad thieves, who have been robbing trunks in transit. The losses which travelers have suffered in this manner recently have greatly increased over the amounts of any previous year.

The bimetallic commissioners who remain in Europe are awaiting the reply of the British government to their proposals. Senator and Mrs. Wolcott are in Carlsbad and ex-Vice President Stewart and Miss Stevenson are sojourning in Paris.

News from the Anglo-Egyptian expedition up the Nile comes slowly and unsatisfactorily. The British government is making a string of regulations of the British commissioner, Sir Herbert Kitchener. The newspaper correspondence is not allowed to publish the details of the expedition, and are forced to take with them six months' supplies and sign the slurring regulations before they are allowed to leave the previous campaign. They are not allowed to go to the front, but are kept well in the rear, and are furnished with just the information that is needed for the day.

Captain Henry Arkwright, who was aide-de-camp to the lord lieutenant of Ireland, a guide named Michael Simond and two porters, Francois and Jean, were killed by a landslide on the grand plateau of Mount Blanc in October, 1866. The bodies of the guides were not recovered after a week. Captain Arkwright's body was only recovered from the ice on Sunday last, 3,000 feet below where he died. All except the feet and hands were recovered. The right hand was marvellously lifelike. The ice had preserved in it the red tint of blood. From the pocket of his gray waistcoat was drawn a silver cigarette case, a kerchief, as good as new, with his name on it. The deceased officer's collar had in it a gold stud, and in his shirt front was a large one of the same metal. The remains of a silver cigarette case was found in his pocket and his gold watch and chain were found near where his body was found. The just and kind doctor and the local gardener held an inquest over the remains, found after a lapse of thirty years. The bodies of Michael Simond and Francois were brought to Chamonix. They will probably be buried at Chamonix.

Lady Habington will preside at the Congress of Women in Green Park, London, on Oxford in September. All the delegates are to wear black bonnets.

The theatrical year of London has reached the lowest ebb. The season is over and the fortnight will usher in the advance guard of a new season. There are but half a dozen theaters of the first class whose doors are open. The rest have closed for the season for amusement, for all of the 400 music halls, great and small, which the city supports, are under full steam. The numbers of American performers on the London stage are remarkable, but the most popular feature on the bills of the Palace and Alhambra are the American biograph, with American views, and the cinematograph, with photographs of the jubilee procession.

Despite the abundance of the theater which strive for the entertainment of Londoners, there is not least a dozen new ones in process of building to be launched into the stream of competition this fall. Most of them are erected in the suburbs, the pretensions of them being christened the New Grand.

The memorial committee, organized chiefly by theatrical people to erect a memorial to Sir Augustus Pugin, has secured a handsome amounting to £2,300. One thousand pounds sterling of the subscription will be devoted to founding a ward in a city hospital.

It will be expended for the erection of a memorial to Sir Augustus Pugin, the memorial to be erected beside the Drury Lane theater.

ECHOES OF THE ANTEROOM

The people of Fulton, Ill., are running up a pretty big attorney's bill and are working the injunction business to the limit in their efforts to prevent the removal of the Modern Woodmen of America headquarters from their town to Rock Island. They had already secured three temporary injunctions and they were all dissolved after a hearing, but they have found a judge who will give them another of the convenient writs, and consequently the removal is still an impossibility.

The third injunction was dissolved by Judge Gust last Wednesday. It was the injunction which effectually put a stop to the removal of the records on the night of August 13, when the melee occurred in which a considerable number of people were hurt. The fight happened after the first and second injunctions had been jointly obtained by Rock Island attorneys, thinking that the legal way had been cleared, and that they could get the records, but the Fultonites prevented this by force of arms.

In passing upon the case Judge Gust remarked that there was something remarkable about the freedom with which injunctions had been handed out by the master-in-chancery courts of Illinois and gave expression to some other opinions of the same character. He went on to say further that he would have been hastening in dissolving the third injunction without hearing, but he wanted to learn whether any new ground had been discovered by the Rock Island attorneys. He said, however, that the third injunction proved to be practically the same as the other two and that additional theories as were advanced were untenable. The Rock Islanders thought that the legal way had been cleared, and that they could get the records, but the Fultonites prevented this by force of arms.

The bitter feeling of the Fulton people in the matter was exhibited on the day that Judge Gust dissolved the third injunction. They had heard of the dissolution of the injunction at once and they expected that the Rock Islanders would come for the records. They were not disappointed. A special was coming from Rock Island and they at once jumped to the conclusion that the Rock Islanders had come to get the records. They were not disappointed. The local order is meeting with great encouragement in its plan to raise a fund to establish headquarters for visiting members of the order in this city during the exposition. All members of the order in the state were asked to donate to the fund and the response has been very liberal. The lodges have been sending in donations at the rate of 10 to 25 cents a member. It is the intention to solicit for donations also among the lodges of Iowa and other neighboring states after the exposition is over. There was no assessment in April.
