THE OMAHA DAILY BEE: THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1897.

MINCOLN, Sept. 8 -(Special)-The republican state central committee met at the Lindell hotel this afternoon to organize for the coming campaign. Twenty-six of the thirty districts were represented, and the members were all feeling good over the prospects. From all parts of the state they brought the news that the good times and good crops are putting an end to the calamity cry and that old-time republicans who were induced by the democratic times and drouth to wander off after false political gods were now ready to return to the party that not only promised, but brought prosperity

After attending to some detail business the committee by unanimous vote agreed to students from the country in the High tender the position of chairman of the state school. The attendance is the largest on on the first train. The committee then took a recess until 4 o'clock. On the arrival of Mr. Mercer the committee convened and the Mr. Mercer the committee convents and the new chairman was called for. He came for-ward and was greeted with applause. He said that he seemed to have been drafted. It would be very inconvenient for him at this time to take up the work, but he considered it the duty of good republicans to respond when duty called, and he would ac-cept the position. He believed the republican party would win this fall. The campaign was a peculiar one, on account of the fact that Nebraska had assumed an important position in the politics of the mation. He believed, however, that the state has reached the turning point in prosperity and national importance, and that thousands of men in Nebraska who have been misled in the past would walk up to the polls this fall and vote the republican ticket. They would be too busy taking care of their crops and increased business to make much fuss during the campaign, but they would remember that the good times always happen to come during republican times and never when the opposition is in power. In the opinion of the speaker the chairman of the committee was not the important feature of the campaign. The real work lay with the committee and the working republicans. He himself did not claim to be a great organizer, but when he was making a canvass for himself he never missed anything. He thought the committee should now go in to win.
