COIT-SARGENT WEDDING A PRETTY AFFAIR TONY.

Surprise Parties Are Numerous, and Several Charming Dinners, Enjoyable Receptions and Pleasant Card Parties Happen.

November days are drawing on space, and still there is little going on in society to distinguish one week above another, or to render the periodical chronicle either a long or a particularly interesting one. The air ds full of rumors enough to fill the season with gayety, if only a part of them were worified and made actual. Some, of course, never will be A great many others will. And in spite of the apparent reluctance of society leaders to take the plunge which shall set the social waters in steady motion, it is generally asserted and widely believed that forces are gradually accumulating and gathering strength which will soon break over the barrier of delay and bring about the Colt-Sargent wedding. Pink was the pre-valling color of the flowers and decorations. A bank of roses and ferms adorned the center of the table, and pink ribbons ex-tended thence to the corners. The menu cards suggested wishbones, Miss Sirgent's being represented as broken, to indicate the prospective attainment of her heart's desire.
