Marying yet goes on apace. This brisk traffe, with its resulting mystical meiting of two into one, would be fraught with menace to the growth of any community were there not other sides to the great problem. The inspired writer of the book of Ecclesiastes, who has been quoted before in these columns, assures his readers that there is "a time to the members of the congregation of the same provided before in these columns. has been quoted before in these columns.

The members of the congregation of the assures his readers that there is "a time to every purpose under the heaven." It has been seen and abundantly proved that October is the best of all times for marrying and giving in marriage. It is at least as good and propitious a season as any to be been in And what more beautifully appropriate the congregation of the congregation of the congregation of the congregation of the Hanscom Park Methodist church gave their last Tuesday evening at the church parlors. In honor of Mrs. Funke and Mrs. Burr of Lincoln Mrs. Kirkendall entertained last Saturday at luncheon Mesdames Funke, been in And what more beautifully approgood and propitious a season as any to be born in. And what more beautifully appro-priate than that the body of man shall be priate than that the body of man shall be laid away in the earth at sunset of a glowing October afternoon, amid the fallen leaves which have lived out their little day?

Since it is possibly the best month of the year for birth, marriage and death, this brown, gorgeous month of October can well afford to yied supremacy in point of some of the incidents which lie between—such as anow balling, and summer touring, and Easter observances, which have their legitimate place at other seasons. It has been a hot and rather uncomfortable month bereabouts. and some of the pursuits in which it unques-tionably leads have been prosecuted with diffloulty; but that only furnishes the exception which proves the general rule. Much social gayety is in sight; if not within the range of myopic vision, at least apparent to the keener eyes which know how to distinguish it from the general grayness of the future.

A pretty contest is that for Queen Polaris, A pretty contest is that for Queen Polaris, now waged daily through the friendly agency of The Bee. Candidates for royal dignity are marshaling their forces and watching the published returns with hope and fear and renewed purpose of activity. No woman was ever raised to queenship in a more truly democratic fashion. The list of competitors shows names of many grades of social prom-inence. An oath of allegiance should be exacted from voters in advance, for it will doubtless be irksome to swear and preserve fealty to a queen whom one does not know and who, off the throne, moves in a circle either higher or lower than her subject. And although no unwise or unjust restrictions should be placed on the candidacy of any worthy young woman, there is a growing sentiment that the cold, the icily regular, the splendidly null, should be barred, no matter what their apparent standing. For wherein is a polar queen good if she is already frozen. The Bee's efforts are all in the direction of warmth and sunshine, and happiness and concord. It feels, however, that it would neglect its duty to many readers if it failed to suggest that no queen be suffered to mount the winter throne in a congenled state.

the Thurstons will give a series of formal Carties during the winter. The national drill, practice marches and the allurements of target shooting have given way to ball room fes-tivities, and punch and delicacies will take the place of the emergency ration for some time to come. The announcement of the opening party for last Tuesday evening was sufficient to induce the fair maiden to join her soldier friend in having a royal good time. From the goodly number of the fair sex present it was evident that the once festive summer girl is again abroad in the land and ever ready to enjoy the waitz and two-step. The park commissioners have decided to expend about $390 this fall in improving Woolworth avenue, west of Thirty-second street, which was recently turned over to cording to the inspector. This time it was in the Third ward and instead of burning or fumigating the bed clothing, it was hung out on the fence for a couple of days. According to the inspector, many of the foreigners here do not realize the important of burning bedding, etc., which has come in contact with diphtheria patients, and, after a brief airing it is again used. This, the inspector says, is one reason for the spread of the disease.
