IN OMAHA'S SOCIAL REALM

Skies Still Bright with Promise for an Active Season.

PLEASANT EVENTS OF THE LAST WEEK

People Generally Manage to Enjoy Themselves and Find Comfort in Prophecies of the Things that Are to Be.

The society season is reluctantly but manifestly yielding to the influences of frosty autumn, and the time is fast approaching when the struggler in the social vortex will have enough to do to keep abreast of the flood. Contrary to general expectations and not a few predictions, nothing of great and general importance happened last week in the so-called but surely misnamed frivolous world. The reports caused by the opening of one or two chestnut burrs, which revealed certain old, ye' ever new, questions concealed within, were heard only within the narrowest possible circle, and efforts have since been made to stop the spread of any possible reverberations. A few have been married, quite a number of society leaders of the future have been born, several hospitable women have entertained their friends in an unostentatious but charming way, and some thousands have voted for Queen Polaris. The struggle for a queenly crown, prosecuted with gratifying vigor by the partisans of a quarter of a thousand rival princesses, is inspiring in all its changing aspects, and the successful candidate, whoever she may be or of what social grade, is sure of an army of retainers, if votes carry fealty with them.

A well known clubman, whose keen and critical appreciation of one of the most noted of Kentucky's products is never allowed to interfere with his predilections in other directions, is telling, on himself, the following story. Some of his friends believe it; others incline to be skeptical:

"It takes considerable discernment sometimes," he says, "to distinguish between the effects of whisky and of love. This I found to be so during a trip I made some time ago to one of the popular resorts. There were plenty of pretty girls there, and naturally a fellow will try to have a pleasant time with the dear creatures. One evening I was out with the boys, and after imbibing a goodly quantity of Kentucky bourbon sauntered to the hotel, and seating myself alongside a certain damsel for whose society I had formed a decided liking, entered into conversation and finally managed to make a definite proposal of marriage. I thought at the time it was love, but it wasn't; it was the whisky. No sooner had I popped than reason returned to its throne and I regretted the step. She took me seriously and to my horror, remarked that she would take the matter into consideration and give me my answer a few days later!

"Well, for four days I stood on the brink of a matrimonial abyss. For four days I wandered horrorstricken about the place in deadly fear that she would decide to accept my proposal. I grew pale and wan. My appetite failed and my thirst grew excessive and intolerable. At last she beckoned me to her side, with a radiant smile which ought to have made me happy, but which froze my pulses with apprehension. I approached her, reflecting that this was the walk which would only end at the altar. She whispered in my ear, with the same delightful little smile and with regret apparently genuine, that she would be a sister to me but—she couldn't marry me.

"My tortured heart leaped for joy and my unquenchable thirst fell from me as a garment. I managed to murmur forth some incoherent grief and then went apart among the shrubbery and danced for very joy. Then I took a solemn vow to abstain from drinking at all summer resorts."

But he will never keep his vow; for to do so would be to forswear summer resorts altogether.

Entertain for Miss Hartman.

In anticipation of the Clarke-Hartman nuptials, which are to take place at All Saints' next Wednesday evening, a number of entertainments have been given for members of the bridal party which are to be followed by still others the first of this week. The wedding party is made up as follows: Miss Susan Clarke of Indianapolis, maid of honor; Mr. Miller of Kansas City, best man; bridesmaids, Misses Mamie Forbes of Oshkosh, Wis.; Susan Colpetzer, Florence Knox and Lila Alexander; ushers, Messrs. Harry Wilkins, Fred Hartman, J. E. George and W. H. Wheeler.

The most elaborate function so far was the dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Ford on Friday evening. The entire bridal party were present with the exception of Mr. Miller, whose place was filled by Dr. Leroy Crummer. The table decorations of roses attracted special attention, and the whole affair was arranged with almost perfection of detail.

The other entertainments have been in the nature of luncheons, Miss Knox officiating as hostess Thursday and Miss Colpetzer Saturday. Another luncheon will be given by Miss Alexander tomorrow, and Mr. and Mrs. Hartman, the parents of the bride, will entertain at dinner Tuesday evening. The wedding ceremony Wednesday will also be followed by an elaborate reception at the residence of Mr. Hartman.

This piano was destroyed in the fire. It is still a mystery how the fire started. The household goods of Marsh Hamilton were totally destroyed by the fire. He had them stored in the house, his wife having died a few years ago, and he was not keeping house.

Bellevue.

Since the incorporation of Fort Crook City, some time ago, the people of that village have been making strenuous efforts to have the adjoining sections of school districts, one and four, united and set off as a separate district. In spite of the protests of the interested districts, last Saturday the county superintendent, John Speedie, granted the petition of the new village. By this decision about $50,000 worth of taxable property was taken from District No. 1, which will so reduce the revenue of the public schools here that even with an increased tax the schools will be compelled to close one or two departments, throwing them back into the ungraded class. The Bellevue school board at once announced its intention to appeal the matter. Accordingly, Friday evening a meeting of the taxpayers of the district was called to ascertain whether the board would be sustained in this action. A. H. Hood, chairman of the board, presided. After a heated discussion, the support of the district was pledged the board, and the matter will be taken into district court.

South Omaha News.

J. T. Robertson was the only candidate voted on for assessor in the First ward at the recent election, there being no candidate on the fusion ticket. Robertson received a good vote and has been declared elected, but it is probable that he will not make the assessment next spring. The Washington dispatches announced a day or two ago that Robertson had been reinstated as stock examiner in the Bureau of Animal Industry. He cannot hold both positions and will resign as assessor as soon as his commission arrives. This action will leave the way open for the county commissioners to appoint a man to fill the vacancy. Already there are a number of candidates in the field for the place, and County Commissioner Hoctor is kept busy dodging them. The old soldiers will make a play for the place and some of the friends of Major Cress are pushing him. Major Cress has made two assessments for the city, the last one having been apparently satisfactory to all concerned. Other veterans are also being mentioned, among them being J. B. Erion, J. O. Eastman and George W. Howe.

Conveyance for Police Use.

The committee on police is investigating the necessity for purchasing a patrol wagon, or else maintaining a rig for the use of the police department. It is claimed that the city is paying out altogether too much money for livery hire, and that something must be done to curtail expenses in this line. The bills for the last few months have come very nearly averaging $60. This is considered exorbitant, and an attempt is to be made to cut the bills to $20 a month in the future, a resolution to that effect having been offered at the last session of the council and laid over pending a report from the committee on police. It is thought that a serviceable rig can be used by the chief or night captain as occasion requires, and thus cut off a large expenditure. It is not thought advisable at this time to invest in a patrol wagon, as there is no money available to meet the first cost, let alone the keeping.

Demand Watchmen or Lights.

City Attorney Montgomery is now engaged in looking up the matter of watchmen and electric lights at the railroad crossings. Some way is to be devised by the attorney and the council to compel the railroads to maintain either lights or watchmen at the crossings. Some time ago a committee was appointed to call upon the railroad officials with a view to arriving at some settlement of the question. To use the words of one of the councilmen the committee met with a frost and did not return. The intention is now to compel the roads by mandamus to maintain either electric lights or watchmen, or possibly both.

Appeal from the Decision.

The citizens of Bellevue have decided to appeal from the decision of John Speedie, county superintendent of schools, in the matter of creating another school district. Superintendent Speedie decided to cut off the portion of the district in which Fort Crook City is located, thus depriving Bellevue of the revenue from liquor licenses and about $60,000 worth of taxable property. A meeting was held at Bellevue last Friday night, when George S. Burtch, the treasurer of the school district, was authorized to take the matter to the courts. Legal proceedings will commence at once.

Death of an Old Resident.

Edward McVey, for a number of years a resident of this city, is dead. He was taken ill at his boarding house, Thirty-third and Q streets, Friday and a physician called. The doctor pronounced it a case of pneumonia and had the patient removed to the South Omaha hospital. In an hour after arriving at the hospital McVey died. Deceased was a pensioner of the Cudahy Packing company and for several years has been paid a good salary whether he worked or not. Arrangements for the funeral are not yet completed.

Trenches Not Yet Filled.

The trenches dug by the gas company on N street still remain, the mayor not having taken any steps yet to replace the paving. As the cost of filling the trenches and relaying the concrete and brick paving will amount to about $200 Mayor Ensor does not feel like incurring the expense unless he is sure of compelling the gas company to pay the bill. It is thought that the matter will be settled in some way within a few days.

Wins Suit Against Gamblers.

Mrs. Anna Eke has been awarded a judgment by the district court against Frank Dolezal and Joe Koutsky. An appeal was taken to the district court and Mrs. Eke wins the amount sued for along with the costs.
