TRANSFER OF A RAILROAD

Leased Line Now Becomes an Integral Part of the Burlington.

TRANSACTION A MERE MATTER OF FORM

Burlington Capital, Will Herenfter Be Operated from Headquarters in Omaha.

By a mere act of bookkeeping the Big Horn Southern railway, extending in Montana from Billings to the southern boundary of the state, a distance of 150 miles, has been changed from a leased line of the Burlington system to a line owned and controlled by the Burlington & Missouri River toad with the Northern Pacific at Billings, Mont. The capital was furnished by the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad, but the construction was done by a separate corporation known as the Big Horn Southern company. At the annual meeting of that company, held in this city August 19, 1896, the transfer of the line to the Burlington system was authorized.

As nearly all of the stock in the Big Horn Southern was owned by Burlington people the change from a leased line to a line owned by the Burlington is not a great one. In this connection it may be remarked that nearly all the Burlington's lines in the west were built by separate corporations, in which Burlington people owned a majority of the stock, with the understanding that the sep-arate lines would later be merged into the Burlington system. This has been the Burlington policy throughout the west, and the transfer of the Big Horn Southern is merely another exemplification of it. The figures connected with the purchase of the Big Horn Southern have not been given out. It was stated at B. & M. headquarters here yesterday that as the change was merely an act of bookkeeping the purchase price was not known here. The deal was cousumouthern Railway company held at Helena, Mont., on Thursday. PLANS OF THE NEW GULF ROAD.

Probability of Extensions Being Com-

Several circumstances presage the early and the capitalists back of him in the Missouri, Karsas & Texas Trust company. The fulfillment of all the intentions of this corporation include the operation of a rail-road from Omaha to Port Arthur, Tex., on the Gulf of Mexico; the absorption of the County of the Nebraska Telephone company, is considerably less than 2 cents—slightly more compana, Kansas City & Eastern and the Eastern railroad from Quincy, Ill., to Beardstown, Ill., to connect with the Baltimore & Ohio South western system.

Such, it is said, is the ultimate aim of the projectors of the great railway system that is destined to work a change in western traffic matters and which is already operat-ing a railroad from Kansas City to the gulf and receiving more business than it can conveniently handle. The consummation of these plans, it is contended, will give to Omaha not only a new southern outlet for its grain but will also give this city direct connection with another eastern trunk line than those centering in Chicago.

Not Disturbed Over Lease of Union

Pacific Bridge. The telegraphic report from Chicago to the effect that the Rock Island and the Milwaukee railroad companies are somewhat disturbed over the prospect of the Union Pacific's reorganization and its probable effect on their leases for an entrance into this city, was much discussed in local railway circles yesterday. As none of the members of the Union Pacific reorganization committee nor any of the general officers of the other two roads concerned are here there is absolutely nothing known about the probable outcome of the mooted question.

A man very familiar with Union Pacific affairs not long ago said to The Bee that the bridge question had not been considered by the Union Pacific reorganization com-mittee, and would not until after the confirmation of the sale, which is expected to come along in December.

Asked for his opinion on the matter yesterday General Western Agent Fred A. Nash of the Milwaukee said: 'I have not been into the Chicago headquarters for some little time, and am therefore not qualified to speak. It is my opinion, however, that there is no excitement about the matter over there. I did not know The Bee was so much read over in Chicago. The Associated Press report closely resembles the article on this subject printed in The Bee some time ago. Railway Notes and Personals.

Order than the company Gives Its Qualify them to manage railread case. In order that the public may have fuller In order that the public may have fuller information of the questions involved in the mandamus suit brought by John O. Yelser against the Nebraska Telephone company. The Bee asked for a brief statement by a representative of the company, who said:

granting a supersedeas, staying proceed-ings upon the judgment of the district court, as being in any sense a reflection upon the district court. The action of the supreme court was not a review of and did not over-rule any discretionary ruling of the district court. The application of the company for a supersedeas was presented in the supreme court as an original question and not upon any claim of error in the ruling of the district court. A record showing was made in the supreme court, upon which it was claimed that the court in the exercise of its own discretion, and independently of any reling whatever in the district court, should grant a supersedeas in order that the company if successful in that court might reap the benefit of its judgment. On inspection railroad. Henceforth it will be an integral part of the Burlington system and will be managed from the headquarters of the B. & tions were involved of great importance; that the district court in the rendition of its M. in this city.

These considerations, differing in some degree at least from those which were presented to exercise it. These questions it is necestlest from those which were presented to sary should be determined by the supreme the district tourt, induced the supreme court of the state, not merely in the interest court without any reference whatever to any ruling in the district court to suspend the judgment of that court until the case could be heard in the supreme court.

There is a quite general misunderstand-would cripple them and render them incap-

There is a quite general misunderstanding as to what this case involves. It is not true, as has been supposed by many per-sons, that it involves the question, whether the rates of a telephone company are sub-ject to state regulation or not. This question is in no manner raised in the case, and to such regulation, by the legislature, or was not known here. The deal was consum-mated at a special meeting of the Big Horn the legislature, to whom the power is delegated. But, of course, we do not admit that the rates should be reduced, because it is easily shown that the rates are now, when Omaha since 1868, working for A. J. Simpson considered with reference to the intrinsic until 1875, when he opened business for himvalue of the service rendered, and with reference to any other matter material to the patrons of the company, phenomenally Several circumstances presage the early We perform a service not unlike that of realization of the plans of A. By mail service it would require at least two letters, perhaps many more. many times as much time, and the cost of stationary and postage would be at leas four times as much. A comparison with any messenger service would be much more favorable to the telephone service. It is a mistake almost universally made by people who form conclusions as to the profits business they know nothing about, that they usually assume that, because there is a large income, there must, of necessity, be a large profit. They can see, from the extent and character of the business that it necessarily produces a large gross income, but they fall It was officially announced in Kansas City to appreciate the amount of cost involved yesterday that the Missouri, Kansas & in maintaining and prosecuting the business.

> efeat bills pending for the reduction of the ompany's rates. The case presents two questions never be ore, so far as we know, or have been able to learn, regarded as law anywhere. They are, if law, of vast importance, not merely to the telephone company, but to every quasi public corporation which is subject to legislative control, and the effect of them would be to paralyze every business of that character. They are as applicable to other quasi public corporations as to telephone companies. It is contended by Mr. Yeiser. and he was sustained by the district court, that any icdividual may, by a mere averment of a certain rate, which he himself names, will enable the company to carn "a fair, reasonable and just dividend," compet the company to respond to a writ of man-damus, and that the court will then have power to determine what is "a fuir, reasonable and just dividend," to permit the compray to earn, and having so determined, it will have power, and it will be its duty, to reduce the company's rates of charges so that they shall produce no more profit than the amount which the court has decided is "a fair, reisonable and just dividend." "a fair, reasonable and just dividend" to is "a fair, reasonable and just dividend" to be earned by a company of this character, is a question which is not susceptible of any kind of proof, and if the power resides in the courts to decide, it is not subject to any legal limitation. It would, in every case depend entirely upon the predilections of the judge. One judge in one locality and subject to one kind of environments might say that 3 per cent should be the limit; another judge, in a different locality or with different environments; might be of the epinion that 5 per cent should be the limit. It would hardly be possible to find two judges who would have the same opinion. Yet, if the proposition contended for is sound, when-ever any individual, with or without reason, brings a case into court, he can select the before whom he desires to bring it, and thus compel the company to submit to a determination of the amount of profit that it should be permitted to carn, and to a reuction of its rates, so that the business cause a court cannot refuse to entertain a cause and render judgment, if it has power. The confusion that would be produced by the existence of such a law can easily be seen, but the consequent disaster cannot even be magined The contention is an obvious fallacy. There ment of the state government, and no such power has ever been contended for by any reflecting person, to place a limit upon the amount of profits that an individual or cor-poration may make. It does not concern the state or the people who deal with these cor-porations how much they make. The thing with which the state and the recople are conerned is, whether or not the rates charged by these corporations are fair and reasonable. the persons dealing with them get in re-irn for the money they pay a service which s cousi in value to the money paid they have ne ground for complaint, no matter how much money the company may be making. That does not concern them. Of course it is conceivable that profits might be so enor nous'y large as to constitute some evidence that the rates charged were unreasonably high, but the primary question, and the only question with which the state or the people have any concern, is, whether or not the have any concern, is, whether or not the service performed by these companies is, in fact, worth what they charge for its performance. If it is, the state has no right to interfere merely for the purpose of limiting the smount of profits to be made. Yet, in this case. Mr. Yelser proceeded entirely upon the theory that he had the right to demand that the court decide what percentage of profit the company should be permitted to earn, and to reduce the rates of the company so that the business would produce no more. against disaster produced by unwise unfair and it is not only probable, but certain, that any business subjected to the management of courts in the way contended for by Mr. Yeiser would soon be reduced to insolvency. There is another important question which arises in the case, viz. Whether the courts possess the power and are, therefore, required, as often as demand is made, to establish, by their judgments, what shall be deemed and accepted as a reasonable charge for services to be performed in future. That the legislature has this power is not denied. It has been exercised by, probably, every state legislature in this country, either directly or through an administrative board It has been exercised by the legislature of this state, and such exercise has been sustained by the supreme court, as it has, also, by the courts of last resort in every state of the union, and by the supreme court of the United States. It has been universally regarded as a legislative function, by courts, judicial function, and no court of last resort his, so far as we can ascertain, ever so dealready performed. In such a case the facts can all be shown by evidence, and the court can render a judgment based upon the evidence adduced, but when the question is what a thing is going to be worth during a future period, or at a future time the courts are powerless. No evidence can be produced and a court cannot pronounce judgment without evidence. Its functions in this re-spect are entirely different from those of a legislative body. Our constitution expressly forbids the courts from exercising any power which properly belongs to the legislature, and if the legislature can exercise this power it is clear the courts are positively forbidden.

He is suing the company for breach of contract in discharging him on January 5 of this year. He maintains that he was employed on November 13, 1894, under contract to hold the position of manager for three years from date. His salary was to have been $5,000 a year. The company is charged with breaking its contract, and Wiley sues to recover the amount of his salary from that date until November 12. According to his figures this would amount to $4,651.60.

In his petition Mr. Wiley incorporates the contract under which he was employed. In this is set out some of the business methods of the company. The section which refers particular to Wiley provides for his employ-ment at a sa'ary of $5,000 as manager for a term of three years, during which time he was to "devote himself unreservedly to the best interests of the company and especially to collect at the earliest possible date a large amount of money due from the
