Concludes He Can Serve Her on the Farm Better Than in the Peultentiary and So Leta Up on Him.

W. C. Holtz, now in the county jall charged with the crime of larceny as ballee, is quite and a good reputation, and was hired. He were the largest in the county and her cattle and horses were sleekest of any for miles around. This condition of affairs was at-tributed to the handiwork of Holtz, and he was voted the prince of farm foremen. As time rolled on, however, there were nasty rumores concerning the conduct of Holtz in connection with a young girl of the neigh-borhood. Later, the starting of these rumors were said to be due to the idle talk of parties who were jealous of the success that was attending the labors of Holtz on the Mary Keneway had confidence in her Mary Keneway had confidence in her foreman end this confidence was not shaftered in the least until August 27, last, at which time twenty-eight head of her fat steers disappeared. Then the scales dropped from her eyes, and, suspecting her model foreman, she instituted a search for her cattle and finally located them at the Union Stock yards, South Omah:. She ascertained that they had been driver there is a late. that they had been driven there by Holtz and had been sold for $500 cash. A warrant of arrest was issued and a day or two later curt. Not being able to furnish bonds, he was sent to the county jail, where he has since remained.

Some weeks ago Holtz returned to Widow Keneway the proceeds of the sale of the cat-tle minus $10 he had spent. After the re-turn of the money the heart of the widow softened. She concluded that the work on her farm was not being conducted as well as under the Holtz regime, and, consequently she made several pilgrim ges to Omaha, cach time paying a visit to Holtz and his attorneys. The last visit was a couple of days ago, at which time she intimated to Holtz that she was willing to let bygones be bygones if he would return and again take the management of the farm. Holtz jumped at the chance of getting out of jall and returning to the agricultural pursuits which he had chosen as a calling and nego-tiations were opened up to secure the reease of the young man.

Holtz says he hopes to be cut of jail very soon. He says that as soon is he secures his liberty he will return to the form, and hereafter conduct himself in a most exempli-ary manner. It is understood that if Holtz is released from custody Widow Keneway will go on his bond for appearance and that the case will never be presecuted.
