NATURE'S SUBLIME WORK

Words: Fashioned by the Master Hand in Yellowstone Park.

IMPRESSIONS OF AN OMAHA VISITOR.

Majestic Views of Mountain and Plain, Canyon and Lake, Springs and Spouters—Striking Wayside Scenes.

"The American people do not seem to appreciate the many natural beauties of this country as much as they should." These remarks were addressed to a Bee reporter by Dr. W. I. Seymour of this city, who has just returned from an extensive trip through the northwest.

"I have read much and heard a great deal about the Yellowstone park, but had a very dim conception of what a visit to this fairy-land of America really meant until I actually visited it. I left Omaha during the extremely hot weather in August, my first stop being in Deadwood, S. D., where I remained a few days, finding the weather very much cooler and pleasanter than one would suppose at such a short distance from here. Returning from Deadwood to Hot Springs, S. D., to remain there over Sunday, I had the pleasure of meeting the Omaha people among them Mr. J. Rogers and wife, Mr. F. J. Marsh, Mr. J. C. Holtorf, Mrs. Cole and daughter, who were enjoying the cool evenings and delightful plunge baths, which constitute the principal attractions of this little city. Leaving Hot Springs, I continued my trip to Sheridan, Wyo., which is a pretty little city, beautifully located at the foot of the big snow-capped mountains. Here again I had the pleasure of meeting Dr. Brown and wife, Mr. C. N. Dietz and Mrs. Victor White. Mr. Dietz has a delightful summer residence near the base of the mountains, some 8,000 feet in altitude, where even in the hottest weather in August the nights are cool and frosty. Leaving here I went directly to Butte, Mont., the most wonderful city of its kind in the world.

Joining a party of friends here, we returned to the entrance of the Yellowstone National Park, where is the gateway to the park. Here we were met by our campers, which consisted of carriages, a mule wagon, guide, a cook, etc., and we commenced our journey of about 150 miles through the park. Leaving Cinnabar in the morning and entering the golden gate we raised about 2,000 feet in a drive of about ten miles. The sublime grandeur of the scenery dawned on us as we entered this natural gateway of rocks, which on one side is a sheer precipice of many hundred feet, the road being cut out of solid rock along the side.

NATURE'S TERRACES

"The next point of interest is Fort Yellowstone, situated at Mammoth Hot Springs, and does not differ from many of our military posts except in the location and the surroundings. Words are inadequate to express the fine impression of this beautiful natural formation which by the action of the water have been in process of construction for generations. Looking toward the springs from the Mammoth Hot Springs Hotel one can hardly imagine that these beautiful terraces of marble white, tinted in places with all the colors of the rainbow, were not aided in their construction by human hands. Terraces upon terraces of snowy whiteness reaching the height of some 200 or 400 feet have been built by an overflow of boiling water which carries some sort of a lime sediment that chemists have failed to analyze. This constantly deposits itself at the edges of the spring, building the walls higher and higher each year, becoming in time nearly as hard as rock, and the little rivulets of water which flow down the sides of this mountain of whiteness form the most beautiful colors. Trees and shrubbery in the near vicinity of the spring have become coated with this whiteness until they look like phantoms emerging from marble. Other springs in this vicinity, through the action of the soil or certain rocks through which they flow, have become changed in color, blue, some most beautiful tints of orange, blue, etc. Some conception of the number of these terraces can be understood when I say that I took up some three hours moving from place to place in order to see the features of particular interest.

"From here we continued our way to the first camping ground, where our tents had already been pitched, and supper, consisting of hot biscuits, bacon and eggs, canned fruits, vegetables, etc., was served on long tables placed under a large tree, all of which was thoroughly enjoyed, as our appetites were of the best. After supper a huge campfire was built from great logs brought from the mountainside near by. Seated on our camp stools, we enjoyed the evening telling stories and singing songs and retired at an early hour to pass a most restless night sleeping on mattresses laid upon the hard ground. However, this feature of discomfort did not trouble us after the first night, as we all slept well, and the cook had some trouble in getting us up at the first dawning of the morning. We had our breakfast in order to cover the twenty or twenty-five miles necessary for each day's travel. Our next day's journey was to the lower end of the park, where we reached at about 3 o'clock in the afternoon a beautiful plateau of grass-covered land with a small river running through it. This afforded us trout fishing and bathing, a crude bath house having been constructed over a warm spring which flowed into the river.

REMINISCENCES OF THE INFERNO

"The next day brought us to the first of the wonderful geysers, which are surely reminders of the inferno, as the place has been described in days gone by, except in this case the fountains are water, and the odor of these springs is strongly sulphurous and until one becomes accustomed to this feature is quite disagreeable to many. Driving on to a little hillock we looked into a basin covering some ten acres of ground almost perfectly white, here and there little streams of hot water spouting up. In other places pools of water, some twenty feet across, boiling furiously. Coming out of a large rock nearby is a most unearthly roar of escaping steam called the 'Growler.' The only comparison I can think of would be the combined roar of 1,000 railroad engines exhausting steam at the same time. Passing on the journey brings us to what is called the Upper Geyser Basin, which is considered by many the most wonderful part of the park. The action of the hot water has formed many peculiar features and the whole region under this field seems to be a boiling mass of hot water which spouts up from time to time at different points, constituting the different geysers. The principal geysers are all named and play at regular intervals known to the guides, enabling one to be prepared for the grand eruption when it takes place."

OLD FAITHFUL AT WORK

"The one which I suppose has created the most interest is 'Old Faithful.' While it is not as strong as some of the others, yet it erupts every hour, and its action is so regular that one can see the water spouting up every hour. Old Faithful when not in action has something the appearance of a crater, being built up on each side with the usual white formation, the height of about twenty feet. This gradually slopes from the edges of the crater off to each side, so that a person can climb up and look into the abyss, about eight or ten feet in diameter. The first indications of an eruption are the gradual rising of the water, boiling furiously and throwing up little streams which gradually come nearer the mouth of the crater until enough force seems to have been gathered, when there is a sudden explosion, the water shoots up 150 feet in a solid body the size of the crater, and apparently remains stationary in the air for about four minutes. Millions of gallons are thrown into the air with each eruption, most of which drops directly back into the crater, but considerable water is carried to the side by the wind and the atmosphere soon condenses the vast clouds of steam into a thick mist. It strikes many as being peculiar that these wonderful freaks of nature should burst through the earth at such a high altitude, as the park averages nearly 8,000 feet over the whole surface. Of course this feature of the world adds to the interest of the park, and while it seems strange that these eruptions should occur here rather than in a lower altitude, yet this is thoroughly understood by naturalists, who, I believe, claim that the crust of the earth is much thinner at these high altitudes than elsewhere.

YELLOWSTONE LAKE

"Proceeding from the geyser Basin on to the south another day brings us sight of the wonderful Yellowstone lake, a body of water some thirty miles in length by twenty in width, nestling at the foot of snow-capped mountains. This water is so pure and clear that it is inhabited by millions of mountain and lake trout, and I understand is the largest body of fresh water at this altitude in the world. Of course you have all heard of catching trout in the Yellowstone park, and being able to throw them into a boiling hot spring and cooking them without moving from where you stand. During the time we were in the park we met W. J. Bryan and family traveling in a manner very similar to ourselves, and succeeded in getting some very laughable stories, one about Mr. Bryan sitting on the edge of one of these springs with rod and line, fishing out of the lake.

"Our next day's drive led us around the north shore of the lake and in the evening brought us to the lower end of the lake, where is situated another one of the mammoth hotels. This is also the head of the Yellowstone river, and our party camped here for some days taking excursions through the park on the beautiful steamer Zella, a craft of three decks and some hundred feet in length. Here for the first time in my life I have been able to catch as many fish as I cared to, consisting wholly of the 'Speckled Beauties,' ranging in weight from a pound and a half to two pounds and a half. Two of us caught fully fifty pounds in one forenoon.

WAYSIDE FEATURES

"On the trip down the Yellowstone river we passed many wonderful features. Sulphur mountain, for example, appears to be a solid body of sulphur some three or four hundred feet high, having a beautiful spring breaking from the side of it some fifty feet above the road, the water being very hot, but clear as crystal. A short distance from Sulphur mountain the Great Mud Volcano, a hole some 150 feet in diameter, in the side of the mountain, at the bottom of which at about 100 feet from the surface, is a mass of soft mud, which occasionally spouts up, throwing the mud in all directions until it has built up a wall around the mouth. A short distance from this there is another mud volcano, called the Paint Pots, as they vary in color, the mud being in some cases a beautiful pink, in others blue, brown and so forth. Leaving these paint pots and mud geysers, we reach the mouth of the Grand Canyon. This is said to be the most wonderful canyon in the world, in the coloring and formation of the rocks which form the great walls. They are something indescribable, and contain all the colors in the rainbow, the dominating color seems to be gold. Driving along the bottom of the canyon to the points of prominence which extend from the road out into the canyon you look down many thousands of feet into the Yellowstone river, which runs at the bottom of the canyon, and although a body of water some thirty rods wide and quite narrow, it seems like a mere blue thread winding its way along the bottom of the great chasm. Nearly half a day was consumed in winding our way down the steep cliffs and narrow paths to the bottom of the canyon, which affords one a most excellent view of the colorings looking up on both sides.

"Reaching the bottom of the Great Falls, which are higher than Niagara, it almost takes one's breath to watch the swirling roar of water coming from such a magnificent height. As it falls into the canyon the roar is deafening, and the mist and spray narrow paths to the bottom of the great chasm, which, though not so high, is much wider and falls over terraces of rocks which make it most artistic. While in the Grand canyon I had rather an exciting experience. As we started to make the ascent myself and a lady friend took a little different road from the rest of the party. As we were following a narrow path along the side of the very steep ascent, we suddenly became aware that we were traveling over what is called the Shiloh Rocks, which are very small stones lying very evenly on the ground, which have the appearance of being solid until you step upon them, and have not been for timely assistance we would have certainly gone down the precipice and thus have probably cut short our park experience."

Dr. Seymour is looking remarkably well and expresses himself as having been delighted with his western trip, which has lasted over three months and included all the principal cities in the north and west.

GOSSIP ABOUT NOTED PEOPLE

Prof. Wilson, an old schoolmaster of Joel Chandler Harris, said recently, in speaking of that author's school days, "Joe was a peculiar boy. While not at all of study, he seemed to be by some intuition what required the most incessant application on the part of other boys and older than himself. He had no favorite study, indeed, he showed little predilection for books of any sort."

Agnes Weir, a niece of Tennyson, speaks thus of the poet in the Contemporary Review: "Much as Tennyson noticed every individual tree and plant, bird life had still greater attraction for him. He was much touched by the fact that the capped linnet loses the red plumage from its head and breast at the first of the month, almost daily, when he goes to the deep yearning for liberty of which this was the sign and type. And the reason I should almost daily, when he went to the summit of the Beacon Hill, was because he loved to watch the wild, free flight of the sea gulls circling around his city cliffs."

"If our country," writes A. Oakley Hall in the Philadelphia Press, "had a Malakka or Palestine, or a national abbey, or cathedral, to bury Deas and place a tablet to his memory I should write upon it this inscription: 'Here repose the mortal remains of Charles Anderson Dana, an Apostle of the Newspaper Faith; and here are slowly crumbling the hand which once wielded a potent pen, the brain that conceived noble thoughts and noble endeavors, and the heart that beat courtesy and love for faithful friends, but shrank toward all ill-doers and worldly shams.'"

The London World gives this as an illustration of the keen humor of the recently appointed Justice Darling: "On one occasion, when Mr. Gladstone was beginning to give up the lead in the House of Commons to Sir William Harcourt, it was noticed by the members that he left the House at the dinner hour, and Sir William Harcourt led for the rest of the sitting. Mr. Darling one evening drove Sir William to fury, on failing to elicit a definite answer to an inquiry, by casually observing in the course of his speech: 'I have noticed that lately the party opposite, adopting an ancient precedent, have set up a party organ to speak the day, and a lesser light to rule the night.'"

The establishment of peace between Italy and King Menelik of Abyssinia is to be sealed by the giving of a number of presents by King Humbert. He will send a sword of honor, richly chased, and a service for 'tege,' the national drink of Abyssinia. For Queen Taitou will be sent a sash of buffalohorn, incrustated with silver; a parasol of red silk, with gold and silver ornaments, and a fan. For the rest of Menelik's family will be sent a most excellent service of the monograms of Menelik and of the queen of Italy. Finally, Ras Makonnen will be sent a sash of red and blue, a richly ornamented gun.

Rev. Robert Collier says a zealous newspaper editor telegraphed to this country the sudden death of Mark Twain in an English town. It happened the well known writer was at that time at his home in Hartford, Conn., and in a very happy state of health. A solicitor had been sent to Hartford, ever seeing the dispatch, immediately called to Hartford for particulars. The message of inquiry came to the much alive dead man, who sent back this amazing answer: "The reports of my death are greatly exaggerated." TWAIN.

CANADA FIXED FOR TROUBLE

A Side Door to the United States Flanked with Modern Guns.

SPECULATION ON A POSSIBLE WAR

Construction of a Fortified Canal by Which British Gunboats Could Be Placed on the Great Lakes on Short Notice.

In the event of warfare between the United States and Canada the name of the quiet little manufacturing and trading town of Gananoque, upon the Dominion side of the St. Lawrence river, opposite Clayton, N. Y., would almost certainly become famous at once as the scene of the first battle, and probably the next fight, would happen at or near the Welland canal, the great channel threading Canadian soil around Niagara Falls.

The importance of the second incident would be entirely contingent upon the result of the first.

The primary action would occur between Canadian volunteer troops and an "American" force, which, arriving upon the frontier with plenty of field artillery to support an infantry column, over the well-equipped Rome, Watertown & Ogdensburg railroad, would leave Clayton upon a fleet of steamboats and scows, masked by the intricate range along the American shore of the river. The Welland canal, which is within range, but when the Welland canal was built by the British government as long ago as 1829, at a cost of $2,000,000, it was created distinctly and solely as a military work, giving Canada an effective key to the great lakes, or Ontario, at least, as long as the convention between the two countries lasts, by which both are prohibited from keeping armed ships, except the necessary revenue vessels, upon the lakes in time of peace.

Whether the obscure but dangerous Welland canal, the very existence of which is not generally known, is really regarded by the Dominion or British governments as a menace to the lake cities of the west, depends upon their faith in an ability to hold the Welland canal open over the entire length for a considerable period after the declaration of hostilities. At any rate, an amount of care and expense is lavished in keeping up the numerous locks and in maintaining a good channel which is out of all proportion to the importance of the commerce passing through, the tollage from which never has met, and evidently never can meet, the annual repair bills.

The Rideau canal has its beginning upon the Cataract river at Kingston, a prosperous business town just at the foot of Lake Ontario, and extends 12 1/2 miles to the capital city of Canada. The canal is, in reality, mainly a chain of picturesque lakes, some of which were formed by the construction of the dams at the locks. There have been many other canals in the world, but none who makes the trip upon the Rideau comes back filled with enthusiasm for the varied and enchanting landscapes which are met along the route. The passenger boats, which are large and comfortable, are operated by the labor performed by the men who attend the twenty-three groups of locks upon the Rideau canal. It is expended in passing through the private yachts of the numerous Amer-groups of islands, and landing at or near Gananoque, which is unfortified, might easily avoid any temporary defenses, and execute a rapid march of twenty miles over a good road to Jones' Falls, the nearest point upon the Rideau canal. The mission of the invaders would be to destroy the important series of locks at this point and thus block the passage of gunboats, troops and munitions between Ottawa and Kingston.

If the attacking force was driven back and the integrity of the canal was maintained, the enemy would promptly run its fleet of light draft gunboats from Halifax and Quebec up the St. Lawrence and Ottawa rivers and through the convenient side door to Kingston, where, under the guns of Fort Henry, the armament of the boats, sent thither by rail, would be replaced and Lake Ontario, with its one antiquated 'revenue cutter' upon the American side, would be subject to the pleasure of the commodore directing the British naval force. His pleasure would, of course, involve incidentally the ravaging of the south shore of the lake, including the important parts of Oswego and Rochester.

A MILITARY WORK. It is, indeed, quite possible that armed vessels of the enemy should proceed directly up the St. Lawrence river through the chain of locks at the several rapids, and get safely by the hastily constructed forts which would
