AMUSEMENTS

Those who stayed away from "A Southern Romance," as presented last night at Boyd's and there were a good many who come under that head, missed a very pretty play and an evening's entertainment which was the more refreshing for being in a measure unexpected.

Miss Hilgert's story, "In God's Country," is not read so much as it should be, wherever the shortcomings of a rather crude dramatization of it are less than its merits. The play is a simple, but the stage version is of uneven merit, and the action sometimes drags unduly and again in the last act, quite too much is caused to happen all at once.

THE PLAY "NEW DOMINION" specialty; the play does decidedly in the nature of the plot rather than in the manner of treatment.

There is a similar association of human and vegetable flowers, the same mortgage on the ancestral real estate, the same welcome and unworthy suitor and a like foreign nobleman traveling incognito. Clement's play, however, is free from the touch of melodrama which is the blemish of the other.

The company is generally excellent. Special praise should be bestowed upon Mr. Emmet Corrigan for a strong and admirably sustained performance of the role of Andy Hill. Wade White and Lee all made impressions more or less favorable. The play is exceedingly well put on the stage. The engagements of the two performances today, matinee and evening.
