MINING NEWS FROM WYOMING

Renewed Interest is Being Shown in the Hartville Camp.

RICH COPPER DEPOSITS ARE THERE

Experts Look Over the Ground with Care and Say the Ore Lies There in Immense Quantities.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Dec. 13.—(Special).—A recent development in the mining situation at the Hartville mining camp in northern Laramie county has aroused the latest mining fever of the prospectors of the region and the great iron camp will soon present scenes of even greater activity than at present.

Expert Butler, of the Colorado Fuel & Iron company, who visited the camp last spring and devoted a week to making a painstaking examination of the mineral deposits of the vicinity, made a report in which he advocated the same ideas now advanced by Mr. Chance.

These opinions, emanating from practical mining men and experts from various localities, are fully corroborated by the history of the Hartville copper camp.

The men who are on the ground already are from many different states, mainly from the prairie, and they came west to prairie prospecting.
