FOLLOWING UP WHITTLESEY

Inspector Crowley Gathers Up the Shreds of Evidence Obtainable.

CULPRIT HAD MANY CHANCES TO STEAL

Treasury Department Showed Him Great Leniency and His Own Carelessness Makes the Mess Almost Unfathomable.

The developments in the Whittlesey defalcation case were very meager yesterday. Special Agent J. J. Crowley of the Treasury department arrived from Chicago yesterday morning and at once took up the work of investigation, with a view of ascertaining the amount of the shortage. This work was hampered by the reason that all of the records that could be found in Whittlesey's office in the federal building and at his home were in such a chaotic condition that they were of little use in ascertaining the amounts he had received or the remittances he had made to the subtreasury at Chicago. At Whittlesey's home letters were found from the department bearing date of last July which Whittlesey had never taken the trouble to open. The letters were opened and were found to be rather urgent requests for remittances of receipts of customs that the department knew were in Whittlesey's hands. Mr. Crowley was unable to throw any light upon what appears to be the strange negligence of the customs officials in rmitting the collector here to retain for so long a time such large amounts of money Mr. Crowley says the regulations of the de-partment require the consigned to receive the goods shipped in bond within forty-eigh ours after their arrival by rall. In case of neglect it becomes the duty of the collector to unload the goods and place them in a separate warehouse to which he alone must hold the keys and which becomes in fact a bonded warshouse. The expense of this is to be borne by the consignee. The belief is that Whittlesey had made representations to the department that he had been keeping Maurer's goods in a bonded warehouse during all of the time that intervened from their arrival here until the present. Crowley spent a part of the day in escertaining the amounts that Whittlesey had collected dur-ing the last year and a bolf. The exact shortage will not be known until the amounts that bive been remitted in that time have been ascertained. The agent wired the Treasury department yesterday for this statement and it will be received today. It is not believed that the shortage will date back further than July 1. The total receipts of the office since then have been, as shown yesterday. Mr. Griffis is quite an extensive by the books of W. A. Maurer, $5.748.00 I is believed that a portion of this has been remitted. Dan Carrigg said yesterday that Whittlesey told him in July that he was short $800, and made an urgent appeal for help in raising it. Carrigg was in St. Louis and Whittlesey wired him to be sure and H. A. Pense was found guilty of stealing get here by July 20, so he could send in 1300 in gold from a fellow farm hand emthe result of this appeal, Carrigg says, that he loaned the collector $400, which has subequently been paid back with the exception

"Shorty" Norton, who returned from the leve that he will eventually give them some information that will disclose the whereabouts of the fugitive. Absolutely no news was received on this point yesterday.

Many people have come forward and told of the assertions made by Whittlesey that he was short in his accounts and was going to leave, and the wonder is now that no word of this ever reached the bondsmen, who will have to make up the shortage. Inspector Crowley said that the department had reeived no intimation that anything was wrong, and asserted that he was not here on Thursday especially for the purpose of checking up the office. He was doing some business for the Treasury department in Omaha and used his own discretion about oming over here and filling in an idle hour by looking over Whittlesey's accounts. When he found him absent he thought of nothing wrong. The big envelope that Whittlesey left for Crowley at the Grand hotel was opened yesterday and found to contain a note saying that Whittlesey was unavoidably ab sent, but would be ready to meet the inspec-tor on Friday. The note was written on Friday morning, and was left at the hotel while Whittlesey was supposed to be on his way to take the train for parts unknown. George H. Irwin, a young man who has been looking after Whittlesey's work and holding the commission of deputy collector, was appointed yesterday to the vacancy. The telegram making the appointment came from Secretary Gage during the afternoon. Irwin immediately took possession of the office and released a number of consignments of goods that were waiting at the transfer.

Paulson-Sawyer Contest. The election contest to determine whether P. W. Paulson or Hugh W. Sawyer received the largest number of votes cast for county superintendent will begin this morning in the room used by the Board of County Supervisors. Prof. Sawyer yesterday named Judge E. E. Aylesworth as his representalive on the board and the contest board will consist of Perry Kerney, chairman of the county board: Clem C. Kimball, representing Paulson, and Judge Aylesworth. torneys who will watch the count for the respective candidates will be Jacob Sims for Pauleon and H. J. Chambers for Sawyer. The contest may be rushed along and completed in a week or it may drag along during the rest of the month. Every vote east in the county will have to be scanned and recounted and as there are many thousands of them scratched the chances for frequent and prolonged squabbling are excellent.

The Iowa State Horticultural society met today for its annual convention. There are about 125 members present. President F. M. H. Cummings of the central Illinois conference was taken up. There is an immense amount of evidence to review in this case and it will not be concluded before noon tomorrow, at which time the conference will adjourn.

Iowa News Notes.

| About 125 members present. President F. M. Powell of Glenwood, in his annual address, said that Iowa is now established as one of the great fruit states of the union. The horticultural products are recognized in the markets of the world. The misgivings of the early horticulturists, who a generation ago hoped to make fruit culture a measurago hoped to make fruit culture a measur-able success, have given place to confidence based on long success. While the whole state is interested in horticulture and there has been evidence of a great extension of interest latterly, only one person to every 4,000 of population belongs to the society. He uggested as a means to increase the membership that a series of cash prizes be of-fered to young persons preparing essays on agricultural and horticultural subjects for the annual meetings of the state society and its auxiliary associations. He also proposed premiums for exhibitors under 21 years of age sending fruits of their own cultivation "I believe the time spent in spirited discus-sions over the respective merits of the Wal-bridge and Ben Davis could be far more profitably employed in developing a crop of emateur horticulturists throughout the emateur horticulturists t state," declared Mr. Powell.

President Powell declared his conviction that the society ought now to establish a journal. He suggested a committee to investigate and report at the next meeting. The president said he had received many com-plaints from people who had bought nursery stock that was represented to them as rec-ommended by the State Horticultural society. The society does not give its indorsement to any stock, and persons buying under such a guaranty may fairly assume that they are being swindled. He recommended that the legislative committee undertake to secure legislation looking to the severe punishment of such swindles.

In conclusion, he recommended that the society take steps at once to make an ex-hibit for Iowa at the Transmississippi and International Exposition at Omaha. He said Iowa ought to make the best display of fruits which should be seen at that show, and it would be of immense value to the state. He desired committees named to correspond and regotiate at once with A. F. Coleman of orning, who has charge of this work for he Iowa commissioners to the exposition. Treasurer William M. Bomberger reported for the year receipts of $5,818.47, expendi-tures $3,887.34, balance $1,929.13,

The crop reports presented by districts averaged for the entire state indicated that the crop of winter apples had been about 40 per cent. Fall apples, 80 per cent and summer apples, 100 per cent; grapes, 89 per cent; raspberries, 60 per cent; blackberries, 75 per cent; strawberries, 60 per cent; currants, 75 per cent; gooseberries, 75 per cent. The ses-sion was devoted to reading papers.

That is better than a sheltering fence. It's cheaper, not in the way, softens, soothes the chapped skin, removes redness and roughness, eradicates wrinkles, destroys blackheads, is not sticky. More, it fights the wind and cold of winter. It is the best armor against the breath of frost. By its cool, refreshing 'ouch it prevents sore, cracked skin. It heats all parts exposed to the chilling blasts of out doors.

We believe in growth; we believe in giving more and more and always more for the money. Beginning with the October issue The Puritan was enlarged from 32 pages to 48. This month it is still further enlarged The enlargement is from 48 pages to 56. Next month

it will be swelled to 64 pages. lhe Puritan has made itself a factor in the publishing interests of the country in a single year. It has done this because its handling has been bold, generous, forceful-other publishers have characterized it as wild extravagance. THE PURITAN is a journal for the refined home, where quality counts. Skimpiness, cheapness, niggardliness, do not appeal to these homes—to gentlewomen. See the December Puritan.
