May the Advocate do Ity share in discomfiting the political enemy of American liberty and national progress. KILLED BY A TRAIN.

The body of a man who had been killed by a train was found by a farmer alongside the B. & M. track a mile this side of Denton this morning. The body was badly mutilated, having been dragged under the train for 200 yards. The top of the head was shaved off just above the eyes, and nearly every bone in the body was broken. The railroad officials at this point were notified of the ghastly find, and I accompanied by the coroner went down on a special train and brought the remains here, where they are lying in the morgu-still unidentified. An inquest will be held in the morning. The man was apparently an Irishman, about 30 years of age. He had black hair and wore no beard. He was dressed in working clothes and wore an ulster overcoat. There were no letters in the pockets to reveal his identity. He was seen at Denton last night and was acting very queerly, at one time lying down across the track. The section hands got him up and conducted him to a place of safety, but he afterwards wandered away down the track toward Lincoln. It is thought be was struck by the eastbound freight which was lying on the track when the train struck

CORNELL-VALE RACE GOSSII

Prospects for the Meeting Next Summer Not Very Promising.

FIERCE CONTROVERSY OVER THE MATTER

Exclusiveness of Yale and Harvard Lends to the Suggestion That They Be Allowed to Flock by Themselves.

The Albany council of Captaine Colson of Cornell Whitney of Vale and Goodrich of Harvard relative to enother eight-oared boating contest among the crews they reprecent, has adjourned and there has been no official statement given out from Ithaca, New Haven or Cambridge concerning the results of that conference. Several unofficial state ments have purported to give what occurred at Afbany, but the captains themselves are keeping their own coursels.

It is pretty well known that the dispute is over the election of the course for the race and over the proposition for the three crewe to meet after the race of 1898 in annual contests. Yale and Harvard have a five years' contract and one year of the contract has passed. Last year Cornell was "tolerated" in the race with Yale and Harvard. Harvard had been beaten by Cor-nell the year before, and hoped with its brand new English coach to get back some of its lost leurels. That is why the Cornell crew was "tolerated." It now looks as though Cornell might have to be "tolerated" for another year, for it ran away from both the Yale and Harvard crews so fast last year that the students of those colleges haven't recovered their breaths or money yet. All would be well, and the public would probably see another grand contest between three first-class crews, but for the stubborn exclusiveness of Yale and Harvard. Both of these colleges would like mighty well to defeat Cornell, and then let the Ithacaus go without a race for another period of twenty years. Harvard has conceded to Yale the right to name the course for next year's race and Coach Cook has very promptly spoken up in favor of the New London course, with the eddies and eel-grass of which he is so very familiar. Cornell has stoutly opposed the New London course, and very properly maintains that the Poughkeepsie course hes proved matisfactory to most crews in the last few years, and should be again selected. Cornell's temerity in coposing go without a race for another period of in the last few years, and should be again selected. Cornell's temerity in exposing Yale's choice may be wondered at, would appear reasonable in view of the fac that the Cornellians hold the undisputed championship of American intercollegiate aquatics. Yale and Harvard would be quite willing to get Cornell down in the eel-grass of the New London course, where the opportunities for the visiting crew are remote, but Cornell would be more than foolish to accept any such invitation. If Yale and Harvard are willing to row Cornell for five years, or even three years, as rumor has that the Ithacans have asked for the selection. Ithacans have asked for, the selection of the New London course might be considered for even though Cornell should lose in the year on that course-as it probably would-it would have some chance to ge back its laurels the following years.

A result of the present controversy that is not at all unlikely to happen is of interest to lovers of pure amateur sport everywhere, especially in the west. Should Cornell de cline the invitation of Yale "to come down to New London for one year only"-as it must needs do if it has any self-respect at all-a grand intercollegiate regatta, includ-ing the crews of Cornell, Pennsylvania, Columbia, Wisconsin, Minnesota and the Naval Cadets, will be in order. Such a regatta would attract the attention of the entire country, possibly excepting a small portion of New England, and would be open to all comers, with a fair course and no favorites, and the best crew would win. If Yale and Harvard want to continue their dual races, where one crew will be sure to win and the other will be certain to finish second, why let them go, and the other colleges will speed them in their going There are better carsmen in other American colleges, as several contests have proved, and SHELTON, Neb., Dec. 19 .- (Special.)-The not be any small or insignificant affair. Yale Shelton Milling and Grain company has and Harvard were not able to keep Pennsylvania from winning first honors in the intercollegiate track and field sports. They could not prevent the ascendency of the Quakers on the foot ball field. They could not prevent Cornell from adding another world's record and victories over Harvard and Yale to its long list of aquatic achievements. more can Yale and Harvard postpone the coming of other colleges to the front in rowing. If the other colleges will have the backbone to band together and prepare for an "American Henley" at Poughkeepsie, its success is certain, and just as certain it is that Yale and Harvard will later be willing Save for a few New York journals, which always incline toward Yale, and some Boston papers that look favorably toward Harvard and its English coach, nearly all the leading eastern papers have severely attacked Yale's attitude in the negotiations pending for another boatrace. Mr. A. G. McVey, who has for the last thirty years been a very able writer on yachting and other aquatic sports, who has for a number of years been associated with the sport of the county for the erection of a court house care been sold at par.

Owing to a little rivalry last Saturday setween two Bloomington merchants, coffee and the court following to say regarding the improved chances of Yale in a point at 1 cent a pound. sporting editors, has the following to say regarding the improved chances of Yale in a race next spring, after commenting rather sharply on Yale's attempt to dictate the New London course to the victorious Cornellians: Yale will win next year's race. In securing the services of Kennedy, a man Harvard or Pennsylvania ought to have engaged by all means, Yale has employed the best boat rigger in America. Besides knowing more about how to rise a shell, Kennedy is one of the best teachers of rowing in the world. At Yale, Kennedy, who was secured at Cook's suggestion, will keep his personality in the background, and Cook will shine as the coach so as to maintain the bluff at New Haven of having an amateur coach of which so much has been made of in the past by Yale. But Kennedy, who I even consider superior to Courincy as a coach, and who knows more about rowing and how to rig a shell in five minutes than Cooks knows in a year, will be the man to prepare Yale's crew for next year's race, If Kennedy is permitted to have his own way, he will give Yale a winning crew. Mark the prediction, Cornell has been queen of the water these many years because Courtney could rig a shell better than the coaches at other colleges, One-half the race is in having the shell properly rigged, and that explains why Yale has not been quite so successful the last few years—since Andrew O'Dea left New Haven to accept the position of coach at the University of Wisconsin—as formerly. Robert Cook to this day knows very little about rigging a boat, O'Dea used to do the rigging at Yale, and now Kennedy has heen secured to do it. Come to think of it, do you remember the reports sent over from Henley last summer about the measurements for the Yale shell having been lost, and Cook being unable to rig the shell until new measurements which had been cabled for would reach him from the boat builders? Well, that bears out my assertion that Cook, while he can teach a stroke, cannot rig a shell. Kennedy o'Dea, Couriney and Ellis Ward do not rig boats from m ace next spring, after commenting rathe Henley.

I really consider Kennedy a better man than Courtney, which is the reason why I

I really consider Kennedy a better man than Courtney, which is the reason why I expect to see Yale defeat Cornell. In rowing, like in foot ball, the college having the best coach must win. Cornell could not lose with Courtney any more than Pennsylvania can lose in foot ball so long as she has Woodruff, unless a better foot ball coach comes to the front, like in aquatics a better man than Courtney has come to the surface in Kennedy. I am willing to take chances of having you call me a faise prophet a year hence by going on record now as saying that Kennedy will prove himself to be even superior to Courtney as a rowing coach, and that Yale will defeat Cornell next summer if they come together in a race, which they likely will do. And to have the question fairly decided, I hope Yale will not insist upon rowing at New London, but go to some neutral course like the one at Poughkeepsie, for instance, where no one will have an advantage or be placed at a disadvantage.

The following bit of comment is from the trenchant pen of Horaco S. Fogel, the well known sporting editor of the Philadelphia Ledger, who ranks only second to Mr. Mc-Vey as an authority on boating matters: It seems strange to me that many people interested in intercollegiate sport, especially boat racing, are so "thick-leaded," to use that bomely expression, as not to comprehend Yale's principal reason for wanting so badly to row at Xew London, that she cannot even be perhanded to listen to reason and argument in favor of any other course. The ruling power in aquatics at Yale is Robert J. Cook — H is Robert J. Cook who knows every tide, every current, every eddy—in brief, every foot of water—in the Thames course, land this knowledge is a great advantage to Yale if she can get anyone to row her at New London, I may be accused of charging Mr. Cook with not being a good sportsman by making this assertion. I do not, mant to do that, but since it is the truth I do not care what the charge may be, for Mg! Cook and the other rowing authorities at Yale are certainly not conducting themselves in a manner to commend the respect of sportsmen by the way they are carrying on at present in arranging for next year's race.

In enacting the role of dictator Yale challenges Cornell to a race, and then has the audicity to demand the right to name terms and the time and place for the contest to take harce.

lenges Cornell to a race, and then has the audacity to demand the right to name terms and the time and place for the contest to take place. Now, who has ever heard of an aspirant for championship honors challenging a champion and dictating terms? This is establishing a new precedent in sporting customs. In brief, Yale asks Cornell to forsake Poughkeepsie, go a couple of hundred miles out of her way to the inconvenience and extra expense of her students, to row the Blue at New London, where, owing to the bad course, the best crew may not win, and compel her old triends, Pennsylvania and Columbia, to also go there, to the inconvenience and extra expense of her students and friends, or else row one race at New London and the other at Poughkeepsie, thus not only going to great expense in shifting places, but taking great risk of interfering with the training of her crew and losing both races, not to mention the double expense to her students and friends in traveling to both places to see the bwo races. The demand of Yale is so absolutely unreasonable that Cornell will gain many new friends and add dignity and sirength to her prestige as "Queen of the Water" if she politely but firmly declines Yale's challenge and notifies the latter that she can have a race if she comes to Poughkeepse, where there is a fair course and where no favors need be asked or handicaps granted. granted,

Frank Daniels makes a cuaracteristic but unique entrance in one act of the scene of "The Idols Eye." It is a straight fail from his billoon, high above the stage interthe sea, which washes the base of an English barrack in India. He declares, as he crawls from the water, "That is the last drop I'll ever take."

Opp. Paxton Hote!. 1408 Farnam St. The Buthless Ages. Lord Playfair has recalled the fact, says the London Standard, that Queen Elizabeth Ireland used to write her lord mayor scolding letters because he allowed the city to grow so fast; it actually contained at the time 160,000 people, who, as the queen wrote, "he came heaped together and in a sorn smothered," and accordingly she forbade any more houses to be built within three miles of London and Westminster. The rate of mortality is as then eighty in 1,000, whereas row it is nineteen, and is being steadily reduced. No one was ever a better hygienist than Moses. The conditions which he enjoined were those which we now seek to attain—clean eighty in the state of the seek to attain—clean eighty and enjoyed good health. Unhappliy between the ancients and ourselves there was a period of 1,000 years, when Michelet, the historian of the period, said that not a man or woman in Europe ever took a bath. Those poor middle ages are suffering from the modern specialist as from the sciolist; the dirty ages Lord Playfair would have them called. And yet they built cathedrais that we cannot even restore becomingly and gave us chivalry and an ideal of woman's purity that is still transforming life. Lord Playfair thinks he has characterized St. Francis when he says that St. Francis knew nothing of the bath; but we wonder what St. Francis when he says that St. Francis knew nothing of the bath; but we wonder what St. Francis would have thought of Lord Playfair and the materialistic ideals that ignore the soul. used to write her lord mayor scolding letters because he allowed the city to grow In Pictures Part XII
