Klondike gold fields. He said he would not of houses and store buildings will be erected advise anyone to go to that remote stetion, in different parts of the city. but declared that there can be no question bout declared that there can be no ducation about there being rich deposits of precious metals in many portions of the tirritory. He referrred briefly to some of the many drawbacks to successful mining of gold. Among other things he referred to the difficulty to allow a shaft to be sunk. He said it was impossible to thaw more than six inches at a time and such work required a large amount of wood, making the cost of sinking a shaft about $50 per foot. An old pre-pector had told him that he had sunk a fifty feet and found the ground frozen as hard at that depth as on the surface.

The governor then took up the question of reaching the gold fields. He said it was reaching the gold helds. He said it was foolish for anyone to expect to get over the pass before the first of March or to get up the Yukon before July 1. Parties going to Ahiska before the times named would be obliged to wait at some point. The Yukon river is never open until the latter part of June the arefuet trip made up the first June, the earliest trip made up the river during the past thirty years being on June 25. Boats drawing more than five feet can-not get over the bar at the mouth of the Yukon and the governor commented on the news recently sent out from New York, an-nouncing the departure of fourteen ships from that port, bound around the horn for Alaska. The trail across the path, the gov-ernor said, could not be crossed before March 1, as the most terriffic storms sweep this section during the winter. The tem-perature falls to 72 degrees below zero and wind blows over 1,000 miles per hour. No man can live in these storms, as numer-ous attempts to get mail over the pass in the

The governor said he would promise, on behalf of his associates, that the condi-tions in the resolution adopted by the meeting would be accepted and every effort would be made to comply with them. He said the party would talk exposition on the remainder of the trip and he promised that he would come to the exposition and stay two or three works

At the conclusion of Governor Sheukley's talk the meeting dissolved and the visitors where the Bee building in a body to ex-amine the newspaper plant, after which they hastened to the depot just in time to catch
