J. B. Young, one of the largest land owners nd farmers in the county, has taken a deer nterest in the swindles that have been orked upon the county by the wolf scalp ounty auditor and the Board of Supervisors nuggesting that it would be an excellent plan for them to offer a suitable reward for arrest and conviction of the swindlers. Young lives in Crescent township, the ery heart of the district where the wolf scale industry has flourished most conspicu-ously for many years. He employs a large umber of men about his stock farms, many f whom have long been residents of the Missouri and Boyer river bottoms, and he has excellent facilities for getting reliable information. There is consequently something significant in the remark he makes in his letter that in his opinion "it costs he taxpayers $50 for every wolf killed in the county." He suggests that the board offer a reward of about $50 for each arrest and conviction of scalp breeders and importers, and believes that the payment of the reward a few times will be to the financial interests of the taxpayers.

There was a great time at the DeLong Industrial school yesterday. Mrs. N. A curtain was stretched across one end of the hall end behind this curtain were several of the ladies with all the presents. One of the girls was given a in such a position that the large hook on the end of the line would fall within the reach of the ladies on the other side. The line was then withdrawn with a present dangling on the end of it, and then another girl t ied her luck. The attendance was 140.

went to the home of his wife last night for the deliberate purpose of shooting her. He had frequently threatened to do this, and on going to do. The man tried to dissuade him. but gave the matter little attention, as Mc-Caun was apparently intoxicated and it was not thought he would carry out his threat. Half an hour later the woman was dead. The couple had been divorced the second time at the last term of court here, about a month ago. At that time the wife's plea was based on threats made by the husband and allegaions of cruelty and neglect. She expressed no fear, however, that he would kill her, as he had threatened to do. Last night, before the crime, McCaun said he was jealous of his wife, with cause.

Very few words were passed at the house The crazed husband opened fire at the woman. Five shots were fired, three of which were of a fatal nature. Death was instantaneous. As soon as he had done the shooting, McCaun fiel from the house. He reside the corpse of the woman he had mur-dered he passionately kissed her cold lips and poured out his grief, saying he loved her and was sorry for what he had done. Suddenly he left the body and went to his Here he told his mother what he had While he was narrating his murderous act his little daughter, but 7 years old, knelt and prayed for her father and water, and when it was handed to him he took a white powder and swallowed it with the water, and left the house. He proceeded at once to the southwest part of the city, in the opposite direction from his wife's home, and went to another house, asked for a drink of water and took another powder. It is now thought this was morphine. In the meanwhile pursuit was formed and a search was begun for the murderer. All night he was hunted for, but no trace of him ould be found. This morning his trail was discovered, leading to the field south of town. Here he was discovered in an old straw stack, where he had passed the night, apparently going there to die, after taking the morphine or ever drug it was. Death had not overtakes him and the cordon of pursuers was slowly closing in on him. Escape was out of the question, so he deliberately placed the muz-zle of his revolver to his forehead and fired. He was picked up and taken in a buggy to his fither's home, where he still lies uneco-scious, with no hope for his life.

There is little question as to what would have been his fate had he fillen alive into the hands of the men who were hunting him down. It is the general sentiment here that his jealousy of Mrs. Mc-Caun was without foredation. She was universally respected in this community and aside from the aspersions cast on her by her husband no suspicion against her private chap cter has ever been voiced. The couple had been married too years. Mrs. McCaun had been married before and leaves two children by her first husband and two by Mc whose own habits of drinking are gonerally held responsible for the tragedy.

come Monday evening, legislative matters are advertised, the feature in the lobbics. It is common talk that Senator Cheshire will introduce the Cheshire umendment again and that he will make it his special business for the session. This involves a new plan of taxing telegraph, telephone, express and sleeping car com-panies. It cassed the last house overwhelmingly, but was defeated by a narrow margin in the senate. The Board of Control measure of state in atitutions will come early and be one of the chief matters of the session. There is noth ing like an agreement as to the form in which this measure should be adopted, though al-most no members will express themselves as opposed to the policy. Redistricting the state for senators is much discussed and regarder as one of the most difficult tasks on hand There is also considerable talk of a new ditricting for representatives, though this not likely to be made at this sersion. Those members who last session urged a state bounty for beet sugar to get the industry started in the state are on hand with the proposition again. An initial move toward conomy will be made early by the introduc-ion of resolutions to reduce the number of employes of the houses.

The democrats of the house held their caucus this evening. There was some discussion of the policy of nominating a democratic candidate for speaker, and on motion Lambert of Jackson it was voted without phosition that the democrats should complinent Mr. Funk, the republican nominee, b giving him their votes. The caucus made a full slate of nominees for the other places at the disposal of the house.
