

MOORES WILLING TO SETTLE

Made Efforts to Learn to Whom He Owed Money for Fees.

EX-CLERK ANXIOUS TO ADJUST ACCOUNTS

Testimony Shows He Employed an Expert to Search out the Amounts that All Might Be Paid.

The Broth-Moore case opened before Referee Clements yesterday morning with James Ruane, a British witness, on the stand on cross-examination. Attorney Harrison and Hoehner propounding the questions testified that the sum of $1,818.73 was all that he could find in the way of fines collected by Frank E. Moore as clerk of the district court and not paid as received. This sum the witness found had been paid into the treasury.

On redirect examination the witness said that he was not devoting his whole time to checking up the office of the clerk. He was employed by Frank E. Moore in the office of the clerk of the district court for a short time during the year 1895. The duties of the witness were to report to Moore the fees in certain cases which were not being paid in court. Witness thought that an expert could go through the books of the clerk's office and within two months ascertain the balance due Moore. He had required the services of Ruane for nearly three years, he said, of the time having had an assistant. Witness, during his employment, made a careful examination of the books of the office and found only three cases in which the fines and penalties had not been paid into the county treasury.

When cross-examined the witness said that Mr. Moore instructed him to report the fees and fines that he might be paid to parties to whom they belonged. Moore instructed witness to work at night in order to get the reports out at the earliest possible moment. For doing this work witness was paid $5 per day and $3 per night. Mr. Moore knew of his own knowledge that Moore paid over the trial fees that he (Moore) reported. His instructions were to report every dollar he could get, and he wanted to settle and pay every dollar he owed.

HELD HIMSELF RESPONSIBLE

When it was called to his attention that Cook, Copeland and Moore had paid their fees, aggregating $350, Mr. Moore, the witness said, remarked that the receipts were in the handwriting of Deputy Mackay and that he knew nothing about them. Mr. Moore further added that if the money had been paid, he (Moore) was the responsible party and would have to make the amount good to the county.

DEPUTY CLERKS TESTIFY

At the afternoon session Deputy County Clerk Harris was called as a witness, bringing with him reports submitted by Mr. Moore while he was clerk of the district court. They showed the payment of fines and fees at divers times.

MARRIED TWENTY-FIVE YEARS

Andronic Celebrate Their Silver Wedding Anniversaries. A very pleasant affair took place in Myrtle hall last night in the tendering of congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Anderson by their many friends in this city. The occasion was the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage, or silver wedding. Promptly at 9 o'clock Clark's orchestra stationed in the east end of the large hall, struck up a wedding march, and preceded by a couple of little flower girls, Mr. and Mrs. Anderson entered the hall. They were met on the stage by Judge John W. Lytle, who officiated as a justice of the peace at their marriage just twenty-five years ago. The marriage vows were read, taken and following this ceremony J. J. Boucher in behalf of the friends who thronged the hall, made a congratulatory speech, in which he voiced the sentiments of Mr. Anderson's old associates. The friendship of many of these present were also evidenced by numerous and handsome presents.

At the conclusion of the program dancing was indulged in until late in the evening, which was concluded by refreshments. The receipts from the evening were for the various lodges to which Mr. and Mrs. Anderson belong. It consisted of O. E. Hart of Nebraska lodge, Knights of Pythias; M. K. Albert, Alpha Chapter No. 9, Woodmen of the World; L. M. Pickett of Yahn-nah-sis Tribe No. 2, Improved Order of Red Men; Mr. and Mrs. George H. Lewis, Mosaic No. 13, No. 1, of the Woodmen of the World, Daughters of Pochontas, Alfarata council No. 3, Mrs. K. E. Decker; Minnehaha council No. 1, District of White Plains, White Plover council No. 9, Mrs. L. P. Pionnet.

Mr. Anderson is one of the old pioneers of this city, having resided here for nearly 40 years. He was a member of the Omaha fire department for about eighteen years of that period. The newly organized Omaha Hackmen's union held its first annual ball successfully last night with an attendance that crowded the floor of Creighton hall with dancers. The ball, which was soon accelerated into a good trot and reached a 2-40 gait by the time the dancers began to disperse. The ball proved beyond a doubt that there is nothing about Omaha, however, that the committees who had the affair in charge included: Charles Moore, master of ceremonies; Fred Myers, Doc Carver, James Johnson, Ed Dietrich, Fred Fields, Albert Wallace, J. G. Colwell, James Tucker, Harry Sherman, Jack Kirby, Charles Sherman, Louis Korabek, Clint De Moos and Charles White.

There are three little things which do more work than any other three little things created by the art, the bow and arrow, Little Early Riders, the best being the famous little pills for stomach and liver troubles.

SOUTH OMAHA NEWS.

Mayor Essor announced yesterday that he would sign the new gas ordinance between now and the regular meeting of the council next Monday night. The mayor said last evening that he had gone over the ordinance carefully and could see nothing objectionable in it. The rights of the city, he says, are fully protected, and the fact that the council was unanimous in voting for it is conclusive evidence that the people desire the franchise to be granted. He thinks that the ordinance is a step toward over foreign competition and as the plant proposed by the new company is to be erected here and employment given to South Omaha, he thinks it is a step toward the benefit of the city.

It remains to be seen, the mayor said, whether Messrs. Flynn, Cressney and Wynne, the promoters, are acting in good faith.

The franchise is for a period of twenty-five years and by the terms of the ordinance the plant is to be completed within 180 days after the date of the franchise. It is in the interest of the new company and when he returns it is expected that the necessary bonds will be filed with the city.

It is the climax of shoe bargains. 8 o'clock this morning.

AMUSEMENTS.

Last evening at Boyd's theater Fanny Bloomfield Zeisler gave a piano recital. She was assisted by Mrs. Martin Cahn. The audience was large and fairly appreciative; it was rarely enthusiastic, although it had abundant cause to be so. This coldness may be properly attributed to the program, which was poorly chosen for a popular concert.

The first four numbers were by Beethoven and consisted of the Minuet in E flat, the Bagatelle, opus 119, number 2, the chorus of Derivish as transcribed by Saint Saens and the Turkish March, from the "Fancies of Athens" as transcribed by Rubinstein. The two latter are interesting only as musical curiosities, and while they gave the performer a chance to display some fine playing of octaves and octaves with thirds, they were an unknown language to the audience and injured the effect of what was to follow.

These who are not familiar with Beethoven's work should not judge of her by these numbers, for although they were played wonderfully well, they are but the foam floating upon the mighty ocean of his genius.

The most interesting piano number was the "Etudes Symphoniques, opus 13," by Schumann. This composition consists of a series of studies, each a technical exercise of a sort of tone picture, complete in itself. They give the performer an abundant opportunity to display all orders of technique. In one there occurs a fugal episode which was so well played that each reappearance of the theme seemed to possess an individual tone color. The last one was given with a sense of humor that was refreshing.

The Chopin numbers were brilliantly played and a massive grandeur was infused into the Polonaise, opus 52, that should have been reserved for the grandest of recitals. The program closed with the Rhapsodie, opus 12, by Liszt. A technical feature of its rendering was a trill executed with the second and third fingers, as an accompaniment to a theme played by the third and fourth fingers of the same hand.

First of the evening was an Improvisation in F sharp by Chopin; the second an arrangement of themes from "Lullaby" and "The Song of the Nightingale," and played by the left hand entirely. In this latter number the pianist did some of the finest work of the evening, all things considered. The rendering of the "Nocturne" was most remarkable, the melody being brought out with a perfection and clearness that achieved the dramatic effect of the voices by Goetz, sung by Mrs. Martin Cahn.

That Mme. Zeisler is one of the greatest pianists of the age is known to everybody who has listened to her playing. Her playing is such as the people of this city rarely hear.
