Wholesale Fruit Merchants Scouring the South—Friction Between Jobbers and Retailers Hard to Be Avoided—Bank Clearings.

The past week has developed a very satisfactory run of general business in the jobbing district. Buyers have been in sood attendance, in fact, many jobbers say that is larger than it has been at any time in one of the principal size from the past year or more, excepting only the week of the State fair. A large proportion of those merchants who put in an appearance the past week evidently came with the week of the State fair. A large proportion of those merchants who put in an appearance the past week evidently came with the most of them bought liberally.

Salesmen on the road also made good progress and the whole situation as regards the jobbing trade continues in a most satisfactory condition, only good reports being heard in all quarters.

Hardory they have received the new spring styles of goods, which seem destined to meet with popular approval. The figures are more subdued and the general effect is much more subdued and the general effect is much more quiet than last year. The new shades are helictrope and brown, while pink and blue are strong favorites.

Secretary Holmes of the Manufacturers association is arranging for a display of the output of twelve different milis, already, leaving only three to be obtained, with a large capacity of the proposition, leaving only three to be obtained, with a large capacity of the proposition of the principal proposition of the principal proposition. Interesting session wheat closed today at the flour from the different milis represented, and fluctuations were narrow. Corn the interior of this structure is to be a model kitchen which will be conducted by Mrs. Harriet MacMurphy and Mrs. Peak Mrs. MacMurphy will deliver daily lectures of flour from the Michael progressed intention of placing orders as the most of them bought liberally.

Salesmen on the road also made good progress and the whole visiting the flour from the displayment of the milis are pr

As a jobber remarked the other day, it is no easy matter to keep from selling goods to consumers at times. For example, a personal friend of the jobber comes along and asks as a favor that a certain article be sold to him, perhaps it is the firm's banker, or perhaps it is a jobber engaged in some other line of business, who is in a position to be of great assistance and who has been very accommodating at various times what is to be done? A refusal nine times out of certain following of friends, it cuts quite a figure. Then it is customary for men employed in a jobbling house to be alloxed to have goods out of the house at wholesale prices. As every house does not handle all the goods that are required in the family the boys gradually make the acquaintance of the men in the other houses and an exchange of courtesles takes place by means of which each man employed in a jobbling house is able to secure most anything that may be desired at who csale. This practice is not by any means restricted to the men on salaries, but the heals of houses practice the vame thing. A promisent retail groe it on salaries, but the heads of houses practice the vame thing. A prominent retail grows read the vame thing. A prominent retail grows read the other day that he had been intimately acquainted with the head of one of the largest jobbing houses in the city and to his certain knowledge he had never scent a dollar at a retail store in the city of Omaha for any merchandise unless it might be for some article that could not be found in any of the jobbing houses of the city. If he wants a near hat he goes to a wholesale shoe houses fits him out and so on through the whole list. If he wants a case of berries or a birrel of apples or a few sacks of potatoes he sends up to one of the ashoesale fruit or produce houses. When the members of firms, all their employes and a long list of friends and favorable comment in financial circles, the assessed valuation being extremely low.

"At the postoffice the month of January, 1855, "Under the new system of assessment the valuation of the taxable property of the city of Omaha is increased to $22,000,000, a fact worthy of comment because it is well known that our rate upon former assessing the property of the city of Omaha is increased to $22,000,000, a fact worthy of comment because it is well known that our rate upon former assessing the property of the city of Omaha is increased to $22,000,000, a fact worthy of comment in financial circles, the assessed valuation being extremely low.

"At the postoffice the month of January, This is another indication of the improved conditions now prevailing in this city. Probably no public office so closely toolches the pulse of commerce as the post-office." At South Omaha in addition to the great to his certain knowledge he had never spent a dollar at a retail store in the city of Omaha for any merchandise unless it might be for some article that could not be found in any of the jobbing houses of the city. If his wants a near hat he goes to a wholesale house, where hats are sold, if it is a pair of shoes some frond in one of the wholesale shoe houses fits him out and so on through the whole list. If he wants a case of berries or a berrel of apples or a few sneks of potatoes he sends up to one of the acho esale fruit or produce houses. When the members of firms, all their employes and a long list of friends and favored individuals are taken into consideration it will be seen at once that this invasion of the retailers' domain is a matter of no small moment and it is a question if the retailer is not justified in entering a strong protest.

The cause for complaint, however, would not appear to be all on one side as the jobbers have troubles of their own. In the cause of the wholesale fruit and produces men, the retailers do not bestiate to buy directly from the producer, thus to a certain extent invading the field of the wholesaler, and some of the largest retailers receive more produce from the country than they can sell over their own counters and become sellers in the open market. Every produce house is at times the recipient of goods that are not wanted by the retail trade, and is compelled to let a pediller or a consumer have teem or see them perish and become a total loss, It is especially so with most kinds of country produce which is perishable and which is received by the commission houses. The country shipper sends in his produce to a commission house to be sold and he expects his commission house to be sold and he expects his commission house to let the first buyer or the beat buyer have the goods. He wants the goods sold regardless of the ceutresies of trade which custom in the city may have built up and in which he takes not the least particle of interest.

For these sand many other reasons the adjustment of the lines and boundaries between the two branches of trade are hard to establis; as the fact large are lard to establis; as the fact all parties in the country is all parties in the country shipper sends in his produce to a commission house to be sold and he expects his commission house to let the first buyer or the best buyer have the goods. He wants the goods sold regardless of the ceutresies of trade which custom in the city may have built up and in which he takes not the least particle of interest.

For these sand many other reasons the adjustment of the lines and boundaries between the two branches of trade are hard to establis; as the factorily to all parties in teres ed, and there is always likely to be more or less friction between the different interests. However fair dealing an both sides will tend to minimize the difficulties. One thing is certain, Omaha is one of the poorest retail, towns of its size in the whole country and anything that will tend to improve the situation will be likely to meet with favor. The large jobbing houses, however, can hardly be held responsible as other more potent causes have been at work, one of the most marked being the prevailing habit among a very large proportion of the inhabitants of buying supplies of various kinds in Chicago and eastern market under the impression that it by can save money by so doing or that it sounds better to say that this or that article was brough from a large eastern market. was brought from a large eastern market.

One unfamiliar with the jobbing trade can hardly form anything like a correct idea of the great number and variety of brushes that are sold from a jobbing point like Omaha. The wholesale gracers, druggists, paper houses and bardware people all handle brushes and lots of them. The unfortunate feature of the business is that all these brushes are made by prison labor and it is CATTLE—Receipts of cattle were light, as usual at the close of the week, and without feature of any importance. Such cattle as were here met with ready sale, and our reature of any importance. Such cattle as were here met with ready sale, and everything was weighed up and the yards deserted at an early hour.

Less than a dozen loads of cornfed steers were offered, and none of them very good. The buyers took what there were paying just about yesterday's prices. A few head sold as high as $4.00, but there were no full loads good enough to bring above $4.50.

Butchers' stock was in good request for the last day of the week, and the few loads here sold to good advantage. The market was at least steady, with buyers in some cases calling it stronger.

There was only one string of stock eattle or feeders in the yards, and it sold on the basis of a firmer market.

The cattle market the past week was rather more favorable to the selling interests. The week started out with beef cattle rather more tayorable to the selling interests. The week started out with beef cattle selling at a little stronger prices, and the market continued very firm until Wednesday, when it received a little backset. It recovered, however, and the lost ground was soon regained, so that at the close of the week values were a little higher than was the case at the close of the previous week. The market on cows and helfers followed

The market on cows and heifers followed the lead of beef steers and showed about the same gains in strength.

The trade in stock cattle started out quite briskly at the beginning of the week, but later on as the country seemed to hold back, and as supplies were accumulating in the hands of speculators, values broke fully life. Toward the last of the week there was a little better demand from the country and values firmed up somewhat. The was a little better demand from the country, and values firmed up somewhat. The country has been a wild buyer all the season, light stock cattle especially selling beyond all renson. Once in a waite, when fat cattle suffer a break, the country seems to realize the folly of paying so much more for feeders than fat cattle are selling for, and then the market experiences a signifand then the market experiences a slight reaction. Still the country is crazy for cat-ile, and the market soon recovers its strength under free buying. Representative NATIVES. NATIVES.

vice at 91 1-2, and I have since discouraged profit taking, as I had posttive knowledge that the advance would hold up to at least present prices. In this connection, I wish to state positively that my advices on wheat have been absolutely correct in every instance during the past three years. Talk is cheap, but I have, and will be pleased to submit, My other advices for the week have been to buy Missouri Pacific, Northern Pacific Preferred, St. Paul and Sugar. In the case of Missauri Pacific, my telegrams were sent out at the very lowest prices recorded. If you think you can use this kind of advice to advantage, send me $10 for a week's service or $30 for one month, and I will immediately put you in position to take advantage of market fluctuations, whether natural or manipulated.
