CUPID GETS IN HIS WORK JUST THE SAME

Lack of Dances Proves No Handicap to the Little God_Valentine's Day and Its Probable Observance.

A number of large receptions appear on the society calendar for the last week, and of some praise. A number of card parties and other smaller functions helped to fill in the week very merrily. There were no large dances for the beaux and belies to glide across crashed floors and plight their roth in cosy and joythan. that is entitled to rank first. The receptions | ices in. openly played a few cards himself in successfully bringing off one wedding and in announcing another for the birthday anniversary of the father of his country. What with dancing parties announced by the Cotillion club of the younger set, by the gifts. Dancing club of the young married folk and by the rejuvenated Monday Night club, which includes members of both of the other clubs, the coming week should afford enough dancing for even the gayest of the debutante or her friends. The renaissance of the Mon-Night club will be a pleasing feature of the week in society. That the dance of Thursday evening will be the first, last and only appearance of the club this season is sufficient incentive for making the dance a great success. It is only to be regretted that the management of this dance has decided to put up the bars against the denizens of the other side of the river, for Omaha society and nearly all its members are indebted to society for invitations to many splendid affairs there this season.

We have all noticed the array of fanciful love tokens in the stop and store windows during the last week. If anyone is unaware of the close approach of St. Valentine's day he (for she could not overlook it) had better be up and doing ere it is too late, for so surely as he allows the day to slip by without sending the proper token, so surely will be later learn of a cooldess on the part of the dear creature to whom he had contemplated giving his envelope-opener and Apropos the display of the season's tokens, many of them, it must be con fessed, are the same old valentines that the grand/athers and grandmothers of today used o send each other when they were sweet hearts, the same lace paper cupids, darts, doves and hearts. They were thought to be quite wonderful in olden days, and spe-cial attention was paid to the words and caning of the love couplet underneath all the decoration. The modern man and maid may exchange valentines, but they are of somewhat different character, and any kind of a gift presented February 14 is a valen-There have been and will be valentine fairs and sales for charitable purposes, but the real celebration will come Monday. Even sandwiches are cut heart shape. Flowers for gifts are selected for their meaning, and of all the days of the year this is the one when a young man may express a tender sentiment for a girl whom he has not dared to approach "on the heart side." There are invitations out for a num-ber of parties for St. Valentine's day and

The latest fad of a band of fashionable Philadelphia women is to form a laughing class for a Lenten diversion. They will meet once a week and have a lesson in voice melody from an elecution teacher. "Giggles" are to be trained out of existence. while the high-pitched tone common to the nervous woman is to be transformed into a scale of musical notes. The teacher of this class that is to be has decided ideas on the laughing question. She asserts that most women "chortle like the jabberwock" of which the late Lewis Carroll wrote, and the musical laugh is as potent in effect as the heroine of John Oliver Hobbes' "Bundle of Life." whose voice was so sirenesque that when "she babbled of brickdust one thought of lutestrings."

Here is the description of a Dickens party that recently occurred in a city about 1,000 miles from Omaha, as given by one of the young women who attended it: "Last Saturday evening a few of us were invited to spend an evening with Dickens. The hostess was the cricket on her hearth, while the host represented Dickens himself. I was costumed as Dolly Varden, and I was dressed so gay and giddy that they all guessed my role at once. When the doors to the dining room were opened we were treated to a surprise. The handsome furniture had all been covered with goods of marked sim-plicity. A very old clock stood on the mantle; there was a castor on the sideboard; the room was lighted with candles; beer muga were scattered all about, and we sat down to a veritable Pickwickian supper. On the menu there was English ale, bloaters, cold roast beef, English chops, English walnuts, English cheese and English plum pudding. The servant was dressed as Tillie Slowboy. I am sure that Dickens' own peo ple would have enjoyed the occasion, but not more than did Sam Weller, Nicholas Nickel and the other characters, that were

Miss Stephenson and Miss Julia Hammond, Miss Helen Cleaveland of Denver, and Miss Dorothy Parker, formed the receiving party with Miss Allen, who was assisted by Misses Andreesen, Morse, Flor-ence Morse, Stone, Webster, Hoagland, Crounse, Tukey, Peck, Bessie Yates, Palmer, Dickinson and Shiverick.

One of the largest as well as most delightful teas of the season was that given by Mrs. Charles S. Raymond at her specious home on Thirty-eighth evenue on Friday afternoon from 3 until 5 o'clock. Mrs Raymond was assisted in receiving her 100 and more guests by Mesdames Love, Lindsey, Ogden, Guiou and Misses Allen and Colpetzer. Mesdames Love and Ogden poured tea and the others assisting served ices and coffee. The color scheme included the liberal use of pink, and pink roses formed the principal floral decoration in the dining room while in the library there were some beautiful palms and hyacinths in rich profusion. The chandeliers were also made attractive with bunches of suspended flowers.

Mrs. Rowland W. Balley and Mrs. James H. Conrad gave a pretty six-hand thirty-three party on Thursday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. Bailey. The house was tastefully decorated with La France roses lucky players with violets, a violet being given for each game won, and the colors, violet and green, were carried out in the the afternoon. The first prize, a silver not polisher, curling tongs and salve box, were won by Mrs. Hacry Weller, Mrs. English and Mrs. Kessler, who cut for first honors with Mrs. Wattles, Mrs. T. J. Mackay and Mrs. H. T. Clarke, who carried off pretty bunches violets as consolations. One of the most charming receptions of the season was that given by Mrs. Charles J. Green on Wednesday afternoon. The lecorations were in red, the color scheme being consistent throughout the reception rooms. Red shades softened the lights and immense bowls of red roses and friesia made brilliant spots of color in the parlors. The appearance of the dining room was esp cially attractive, the round table of polished mahogany having a large centerpiece of Battenberg lace with many smaller pieces, and in the center a silver basket filled with and in the center a silver basket filled with red cirnations, the whole surrounded by red candles in silver candlesticks. Mrs. W. H. McCord poured chocolate and Mrs. W. F. Gurley coffee. Others asisting the hostess were: Mesdames Wessells, Manderson, Evans, D. O. Clark, Morris, John E. Wilbur, McCord, J. O. Lehmer, D. in honor of Mr. Horace G. Burt, president-elect of the Union Pacific Railroad company, by Mrs. Stephen A. McWhorter at her home, 104 South Thirty-pinth street, on Saturday evening of last week. By many of the guests it was regarded as the most brilliant affair of its kind given in Omaha this season. The guests were a dozen of the prominent railroad and professional men of the city. On entering the beautiful dicithe first thing to capture their attention. It was an immense Union Pacific shield, suspended from the chandeller and hanging over the center of the table. Red and white roses in exact and parallel rows represented the red and white stripes of the familiar shield, while the blue field at the top of the shield was composed of a deep bank of rich violets, the whole blending together with exquisite effect. The center-piece consisted of a large bunch of red carnations in loose form. The color scheme throughout was red and it was carried out in an admirable manner. At each cover there was a rare menu card ornamented with a beautiful French etching. The dinner of ten courses was a splendid repast and was followed by a brilliant treat of wit and humor. The feature of the post-prandial exercises was the reading of an original poem of sixteen stanzas by Judge Ives. The verses contained many touching allusions to the trips of inspection taken by the officials of "The Overland Route" and were enjoyed by all, and by none more than by President Burt and General Manager Dick inson. During the dinner some choice musi-cal selections on the piano and violin were rendered under the direction of Mrs. Mc Whorter.
