CONSTANT DEMAND FOR TRAINED ABILITY

Calling the Roll of American College Women in Literature-Women as Teachers_Educational Notes and Incidents.

Commenting on the overcrowded condition of the professions Leslie's Weekly says the only one affording opportunities for executive ability and training is that of superintendent of public schools. For that grade of talent there is a growing demand. "The American public school system," says Leslie's, "is suffering more from a lack of proper wisdom in its administration than from any other cause. This system is gradually improving. This improvement has resulted from a better supervision, but still further improvement should be made, and munity, of inspiring teachers and of training boys and girls for noble citizenship. The in a charrige, an' I let him stay at home, position, too, is one having a proper peunlary reward.

Vaccur college has been in existence thirtyne years; Wellesley college and Smith have been graduating classes for a secre of years. Their graduates are now the heads of homes, ibrariaus, doctors, private secretaries. But they have not entered the field of literature, strictly, so-called, as in advance one would have supposed.

When one attempts to count up the American women who have a national reputation as authors, says Leslie's Weewly, one will be accompanied by Mrs. McKinley and finds the list pretty short. Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe is possibly the most famous. s:50 am but Mrs. Stowe did her great work long be-fore Vassar college was founded. Mrs. MINNE- Stowe's biographer, Mrs. Fields, has an enviable reputation, but she has no college de-gree. terest in classical circles is "The Mycenaean Age," by Dr. Chrestos Tsountas, director of excavations at Mycenae, and Irving Manatt, formerly chancellor of Nebraska University and more recently minister to Greece. The book is not so much a record of discoveries as a systematic survey of a civilization and is without doubt the most accurate and crit-ical study of the Homeric age yet placed before the public.

The students' national convention brought out all the energy and wire pulling of col-lege politics. It developed into a fierce struggle between the republicans and free silver factions and never got further than temporary organization, which the silverites escured on a very close vote, after many charges of "stuffing" delegations. Party spirit ran so high that the chancellor was brought in with consent of both contending factions to preside until a temporary organization could be effected.

Educational Notes. The single item of teachers' salaries in the schools of New York City, exclusive of the evening schools, amounts to $4,500,000 for the year 1898, and for the compensation of janitors more than $400,000 will be paid. The school supplies, books, maps and stationery will cost more than $500,000, and there is another item of expense, "repairs to pianos," $7,000. The teacher of a city school recently received the following note explaining the ab-sence of one of the pupils the day before, according to Harper's Round Table: "Plese according to Harper's Round Table: "Plese excoose Henny for absents yeesterday.
