IMPROVING COUNTRY ROADS

Thoroughfares in Rural Districts to Get Immediate Attention.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS MAKING PLANS

Ostrom and Hofeldt Looking Over the Highways to Learn Just What is Needed to Put Them in Condition.

County Commissioners Ostrom and Hofeldt of the road committee have gone to the country for the purpose of investigating and reporting to the board the roads that will be improved during the coming season. They will return in time for the Saturday meetang, but at that time they will not be prepared to submit tehir reports. Next week they will mak'e another tour of the county and at the following meeting of the board son and on toward Bennington; the Center crally than any other throughout the state street road, extending from the end of Center is the wall-eyed pike. Carp and black bass ter street, southwest toward the State fair have also been found very desirable in many grounds; the Dodge street road, extending from a point where Dodge street intersects the city limits to a point not far from Happy Hollow. There still remains some $18,000 in the permanent road improvement dunc, and this is to be used in improving and extending the Dodge and Center atreet roads. Bids for doing this work will be received by the county commissioners on April 2, and it is thought that the contracts will be awarded at once, that the work of paving may begin at the earliest possible

EXTENSIONS PLANNED.

With the funds available the commissioners hope to extend the Dodge and Center street paving at least five miles, which will give two paved roadways into the country for a distance of at least ten miles, and possibly fifteen. The Dodge street road will extend directly west, while the Center street road will bear off to the southwest. With these two roads extended for such a distance, the commissioners figure that the fa-be of the best, even in bad weather.

It is largely for the purpose of ascertaining what roads should be improved in order to tap these two thoroughfares that the company of the purpose of the company missioners are now out on their tour of the Chairman Kierstead, in speaking of road matters, said: "We expect to have a great many of the roads completed long before the close of the exposition. We are pushing this work that visitors here may have good roads to drive over when they visit the rural dis-tricts, as many of them will. We do not propose to exhaust the road fund, but we do prepose to expend a good deal of money in putting our thoroughfares in first-class condition. There is nothing that impresses strangers more than good roads, well kept, and to show people from abroad that we are up-to-date we intend to place the roads in better condition than ever before.

"Usually it has been the custom to start road work about the latter part of May, but this year we are going to begin it fully one month earlier. In fact, some of the work on new contracts will begin in April, and will be hurried along to completion. Two of the grading contractors are at work now. The man who has the contract for grading the west end of Center street has a large force of men at work, while one contractor in ever necessary, that the three improved roads may be in perfect condition. "While we have nothing to do with the roads and streets in the city, we propose to show the city council that we are alive to the interests of the county, and if the roads are not in good condition, it will not be the fault of the commissioners."

FISH FOR NEBRASKA STREAMS.

Car Out with Another Lot of Trout for the Northern Rivers.

The car of the Nebraska Fish commission left the Webster street depot en route from South Bend to the northern part of the state. Superintendent of Hatcheries O'Brien and his assistant, H. Hempel, have charge of the car which is heavily stocked with fish that they will be ready to report.

While a great deal of work was done on the roads last year, it is probable that much more will be done this year. It is the intention of the commissioners to put the roads tention of the commissioners to put the roads in the best possible condition and build in a number of little gaps, connecting the country roads with the paved highways leading out from the city.

At this time there are three paved roadways, the work on which has been done by the country out of the proceeds of the $150. Hempel says that the catfish is extremely 2000 of road improvements bonds voted some years ago. The roads that have been so improved are: The Military road, paved with sandstone and extending through Benson and on toward Bennington; the Center

All Over a Bicycle.

Ruby Rosenberg is in the courts, seeking to recover the sum of $5,000 alleged damages from Morris Rosenblatt. A year or so ago Rosenblatt was the owner of a bicycle. One day the wheel was stolen and some time later it was found in the possession of Rosenberg. Rosenberg was willing to give it up but he wanted $20, the amount which he originally paid. Rosenblatt offered $15, but still Rosenberg hung out for the additional $5. The upshot of the whole matter was that Rosenberg was arrested on a warrant sworn out by Rosenblatt, charging the secreting of stolen property. Rosenberg was arrested and thrown in jail, where he remained three hours. Now he wants $5,000 as balm for the disgrace which he alleges has been brought upon him. to recover the sum of $5,000 alleged damages

The stipulation by which Thomas Murray is given a year by a federal court order in which to raise enough money with which to save his priperty from sale to satisfy a judgment for $42,000 was published as covering the Murray hotel. The fact is that this stipulation covers Murray's property in the county except the hotel. The proceedings involving the chotel are set for final hearing on Monday. W. Farnam Smith has nothing to Jo with the hotel.

Burns Carter's Stables. West Omaha has commenced on his contract and is making the dirt fly at a lively rate. These are contracts that were awarded last year, but nothing to speak of was done on them until this spring.

FRENCH DESIGN FOR THIN SUMMER GOWN FROM HARPER'S BAZAR

A dainty French dress is of silk warp barege in a shadowy flowered pattern of wisteria and turquoise blue harmoniously blended. This is also an attractive design for grenadine or for organdie or other thin cotton gowns. The skirt, which is the latest seven-gored model, three and three-quarter yards wide at the foot, is plain at the front and sides, with the fulness shirred into a tiny space at the back. It is trimmed with two circular flounces placed straight across the back breadths, and diminishing in width at the front, where they round up toward the waist, meeting at the belt.

The waist is made with a double yoke, the upper one extending slightly over the shoulders to breaden the effect above the close sleeves, which are laid in two high folds that hardly suggest a puff, but prevent them from being quite plain. Below the yoke a center box-pieat, with single pleats meeting it on either side, forms the lower front of the waist. Yokes of the same form cover the upper back, while below are pleats turning toward the middle. The collar has the flat effect which is a feature of many new summer gowns. The corsage is belted with velvet ribbon having two long such code. Little slik musiin ruffles border the top and bettom of the skirt flounces, as well as the yokes, pleats, collar and sleeves. The waist may be fastened under the arm or in the middle of the back—a mode much in vogue in imported gowns. The proper cut of the gown can be obtained from the cut paper patterns furnished by Harper's Bazar, where it appears.

Bazar, where it appears.

This is a becoming model for a separate foulard or taffets silk waist to be worn with different skirts, and it may be trimmed with ruffics or ruches of the same, or with bands of ribbon or velvet.

Quantity of material approximate amount for medium size—west goods, forty-two inches wide, elect yards; cotton fabrics, thirty inches wide, ten yards; elik muslin, two end one-balf yerin; slik for foundation skirt and lining, fourteen pards.
