Local Society Finds Much Fleasure Within the Theater Walls.

LITTLE TO BREAK THE LENTEN MONOTONY

Usual Number of Social Functions Are Held, but They Are Small Affairs_Doings of the Swell Set.

faithfully observed by the church folk and their retirement from the local field of social were the recipients at the hands of the men activity was naturally antecedent to a general period of guletude.

There have been a few little supper parties and various other forms of evening entertainment by the swell set during the week, but one's life is in great jeopardy should any mention be made of such pleasant little amenities. It would really not look at all right to read of sundry members of our strictost church set entertaining during Lent, you know. It can be readily underwhy the weekly grist of cards and perfumed notes in the editor's mail hus been made up largely of requests "not to make any mention of our little affair." It may be that the sin of omission is not greater than that of commission.

Of the affairs that may be mentioned the handsome dinner given by the Dundee folk at the Millard hotel easily takes first place of the week's social events. There have been somewhat less than the usual number of conductive and that delightful relic of the colonial period known as "the surprise party." But society found its greatest enforment at the theater during the first two evenings of the week. There was a pretty generous turnout of the belies and beaux. ough many of both persuasions were unable to attend on account of absence from the city. On both nights there was a fair display of evening dress and many pretty faces adorned the boxes. The selfish young men who played stag, however, did not rise above the level of their business suits.

If the theater was the principal attraction during the last week we may reasonably expect that it will be the same during the week to come. It is to be feared that more than one or three little savings banks will have to give up a part of their contents for the purchase of seats to hear a favorite einger. It may not be irrelevant to hint that Omaha society will probably rise to the demands of the event and will doubtless be uplified thereby. Scats at $5 per capita will cause many of our young men to think twice before inviting their best girls and the upper regions are bound to be superlatively popular.

Apropos the upper gallery, which is being discussed in anticipation of Melba's visit, Eugene Cowles is to be credited with a compliment to the upper gallery during his at San Antonio Miss Anna Belle Harper wea hosen as one of the maids of honor to Miss recent visit. No one will gainsay the fact that Mr. Cowles' experience on the stage Mary Agatha Maverick, sponsor for the Thurston Rifles.

makes him a pretty good authority on theat-rical matters. He said: "I would rather have the verdict of the gallery on a play or opera than the decision of any other part of the house. As a rule the people in the gallery can appreciate a piece better than the people in the boxes. They are more reliable critics. I have noted this a number of times since I've been singing on the stage and it was always my opinion when as a bink clerk I used to sit perched up in the highest galiery on first nights." This incident may be more theatrical than social in character, but it will surely ease the feel ings of those who are thinking of going upstairs to hear the opera.

"THE BARBER OF SEVILLE"

There is naturally considerable interest in the story of Rossini's most fluent of melodic art. "The Barber of Seville," which will be the vehicle of Madam Melba's in-troduction to the eager and anticipating public of this city and its surroundings-at Boyd's theater on Wednesday evening, April 6-when she appears as the bright star of the forces assembled by Meesrs. Walter Damrosch and Charles A. Ellis to present this brilliant chef d'oeuvre of Italian coloratura writing. Probably the words of the librettist himself may be taken as a clever indication of the text. "The story," said he, "is a simple one. An amorous old man proposes to marry his ward. A young lover, more adroit, anticipates him and marries her in the guardian's house and right before his face. This is the foundation on which might be built with like success a tragedy, a comedy, a drama, an opera, etc. Is Moliete's 'Avare' different? Or is 'Le Grand Mithridate' another thing? The species of a piece, like unto that of every other action, depends less on the foundation than on characters who intrigue.

characters who intrigue." In Seville lives Dr. Bartolo, brutal, amorous, jealous, "ruse, rase, blase," who loves and wishes to marry his word, Rosina. The reckless and remantic Count Almaviva had seen her in Madrid and for love of her is now in Seville. Serecading her, he meets Figaro, the barber, go-between, factotum. The latter advices him to gain en-trance into Bartolo's house in the guise of a soldier, with a billet of quartering. Rosina has heard the wooling of the count, whem she knows only as Lindor.
