GRAPE GROWERS IN SESSION

Laying Out Plans for Their Show at Transmississippi Exposition. TAYLOR TALKS TO THEM OF POSSIBILITIES. Superintendent of the Horticultural Exhibit interests the members greatly in his idea for a Great Display.

There was a large attendance at the meeting of the grape growers in Farmers' hall yesterday afternoon, and the deepest interest was taken in the work of preparing for the fruit exhibit to be made at the exposition. Prof. Taylor of the Nebraska State Horticultural society and the superintendent of the department in the hour or more to the discussion of the fruit exhibits to be made. He explained that each exhibitor or association will have credit for separate exhibits and receive full benefit from the advertising of grapes and other fruits on the special days. He thought it would be best for the Council Bluffs fruit growers to make up a grape exhibit and make the special "grape day" one of the features of the exposition. There was no reluctance on the part of any of the members to take hold of the matter, and when a resolution to that effect was presented it received the approval of every member present.

The resolution instructed the chairman to appoint a committee to act with him whose duty it shall be to press forward the work of preparing such an exhibit. The resolution pledged each member of the association to an active part in furnishing a supply of grapes to be given away on "grape day."

President Graham of the Transmississippi association was present, and laid before the members the necessity for pushing forward the enterprise upon which the committee has been working so long. All of the fruit men evinced a lively interest in the business of the wigwam, and a promise of substantial assistance was given. Mr. Bonham thought the frame exhibit would be one of the enticing features connected with the wigwam. He recalled the fact that only thirty-four years ago he and Mr. Graham were the only persons in this part of the country who had growing grape vines, and now there are over 200 magnificent vineyards around the city.

The remainder of the session was devoted to the discussion of finances and business of the association, and accepting the resignation of Treasurer Konigsmacher.

Two Important Events. There will soon be an opening of the war between the United States and Germany according to latest diplomatic reports. The grand opening of the Bourgeois Music house will also soon take place. In the meantime it is the desire of the new proprietors to locate the location of their new store at 325 Broadway, where the organ stands on top of the building. Their music is the latest; their new and new the place has the best of modern times; their organs have the sweetest tone. All their mandolins, guitars, violins, etc., harmonize with the rest.

Individual Communion Cups. Presbyterians Engage in an Interesting Debate on the Topic. The individual communion cups has been brought up in several of the local churches and has reached almost an acute stage in the First Presbyterian congregation, where about an equal number of members favor and oppose it. The regular communion service there will be held one week from today and the decision has almost been reached to begin the individual communion at that time, provided the individual cups can be secured from the makers in time and on satisfactory terms. Before the matter has been definitely settled a congregational meeting will be held and all of the advocates and opponents will be given an opportunity to express their ideas. The opponents of the plan are preparing for the meeting and will lay before the congregation some opinions from high authority. A letter has been received from Prof. George T. Purves, professor of Greek in the Princeton Theological seminary, which will be laid before the meeting. "In the institution of the Lord's supper," says Prof. Purves, "the natural impression on the records is that the Savior used but one cup, which was passed around the table, from which each disciple drank. This implies that the natural implication of the language is that only one cup was used in the dining around of one cup was, of course, intended to symbolize that all of the disciples together participated in the benefits of Christ's sacrifice, so that they communed with Him and with one another. Hence, I judge our observance of the sacrament should symbolically represent the same idea. This does not require, indeed, that the whole congregation should drink out of one cup. The idea is sufficiently represented if a large number of the congregation should drink out of one cup. The whole idea is that the symbolized in the supper should be adequately represented, and it would seem to me to be a foolish idea of the symbolism to insist that one cup should be used for the entire congregation, no matter how large the latter might be. But when we consider the modern individual cup observance, it seems to me that in it the representation of the communion of the disciples with each other is reduced to a minimum. I will not say that the symbolism is absolutely destroyed, for the cups are contained in a common carrier, and the communicants, sitting side by side, may still be reminded of their relation to one another as well as to the Lord. But the symbolism is reduced to a minimum. It is not emphasized, and the latter idea of separation between the communicants is also visibly introduced. Hence I do not like the individual cup observance, although I am no stickler for forms and would be willing to admit any reasonable modification of the form provided it did not destroy symbolism as provided that a sufficient reason can be shown. The only reasons for individual cups are sanitary, and I confess these do not appear to be sufficient. I think they are due to a morbid sentiment, and that no more physical danger is incurred by using the same cup with others than using the same street car. Hence, I am opposed to individual cups. I do not, indeed, believe in favor of absolutely prohibiting them, but I would throw my influence against them. I would feel that my communion had received a rude shock if we were compelled to observe it otherwise than by a symbolic recognition of the communion of the saints, churches where the subject is up are watching the progress in the Presbyterian congregation with much interest.

Where the Wheel Was Stolen. The surmise that William Cooper, the tramp picked up with a new bicycle in his possession which he was endeavoring to sell, had broken into a freight car and stolen the wheel from an assignment, proved to be correct. Late Friday night a car of merchandise was delivered by the Northwestern at the transfer with the seals broken and bearing undoubted evidence that it had been robbed. The waybill showed that one bicycle was missing. Special Detective Riley of the company was wired to investigate, and reached the city yesterday morning. He had read the description of the stolen wheel in the Bee and was greatly pleased to find both the wheel and the thief in the city jail. Cooper acknowledged the theft after a few questions and told how he had stolen it. He said he broke into the car at Carroll, and spent his time while the train was running to Missouri Valley in setting up the wheel and getting it in order to ride. At Missouri Valley he watched his chance and left the car with the wheel without attracting attention, and then slowly made his way to this city, riding the greater part of the distance in a farmer's wagon. He was arrested within twenty minutes after reaching town. He will be prosecuted for burglary.

Water Bills Now Due. Pay this week and save five per cent. The elaborate display of fine Easter millinery goods and fancy needle work at Messdames Stork & Crisp's store, 341 Broadway, yesterday was highly complimented by those who saw it. Everything was artistically arranged and the excellent taste for the season in the millinery line was one that hardly ever excelled in the city. It is to the advantage of every lady contemplating buying a hat or bonnet to see the display in the millinery store and see the fine line of goods displayed there.

Poultry wire and garden seeds at J. Zoller & Co. Injunction to Save the Alley. The threatened injunction to restrain the Citizens' bank and E. E. Hart from permanently closing the alley between Pearl and Main streets just south of Broadway, and familiarly known as "Presbyterian alley," was applied for yesterday in the district court. N. P. Dodge and S. C. Dodge, owners of a portion of the property adjoining the alley, are the plaintiffs. They allege that the alley was laid out by agreement of the property owners in 1855, and was used continuously thereafter for a period of ten years without objection. Under the last existing ordinance the continuous use gave the public right to claim title. Since then, the petition avers, the alley has been used continuously with the knowledge and consent of the holders of abutting property. They allege that the closing of it will inflict great damage to all of the other lots by shutting up back entrances, and ask for a permanent injunction. No time has been set for hearing the parties, but it is expected that all of the parties interested will press for an early adjudication.

Grand Jury Adjourns. The grand jury made its report yesterday morning and adjourned till May 16. Only two indictments were returned against prisoners already under arrest. Charles Gerber, the old German who got into trouble on account of his disposition to issue worthless drafts, was indicted on two charges. He is now in the county jail.

Fred Stone, the negro who attempted to use a razor on John Linder and some of the employees of Linder's wholesale liquor store, was indicted for assault with intent to do great bodily injury. Stone had a hearing in Justice Vlen's court and his case was continued and he was permitted to go on his own recognizance. His case was called a few days ago, but he failed to appear, and a further continuance was granted. This led to the matter being placed before the grand jury, and an indictment was quickly returned upon the facts presented.

Several cases were ignored. Mrs. Pfeiffer's millinery display yesterday was considered to be the most successful affair of the kind held for many years.
