of Vacancies to Fill. County Auditor Matthews presented to the Board of Supervisors yesterday a list of the vacancies that had arisen in the offices of justices of the peace and constables throughout the county since the regular meeting of the board in January. A number of the men who were elected last fall failed to qualify on the lat of January as the law prescribes, and the vacancies were filled. Since then a number bave resigned and others have moved out of the county and state without taking the trouble to notify the county officials that they had vacated the offices to which they were elected. The board filled the following vacancies: Jus-tices of the peace—Belknap township, J. N. Gardiner; Crescent, N. Swanson; Layton, J. B. Johnascn; Lincoln, F. W. Jones and E. L. Pardee; Norwalk, Thomas Flood and R. M. McKinzle. Constables—Carson township, John Harbert; Center, H. W. Bowers; Grove, F. E. Putnam; Keg Creek, Fred Lammert; Norwalk, F. L. The board took up the proposition of the Nebraska Telephone company to place two long distance telephones in the county court ouse, which was called out by a petition bearing the names of all of the officers em-ployed in the building with the exception of the county auditor. The proposition was to furnish the instruments for $70 a year and extension tets leading into another room for $30 a year. No action was taken in the matter, but it will probably be favorably considered before the board adjourns. n a Short Time Several Thousand Men Can Be Fut in Readiness to Fight for the

DES MOINES, April 7 .- (Special.)-In case Governor Shaw of Iowa is called upon for roops he will send the National Guard to the front and then call for volunteers. The numerical strength of the Iowa National Guard is 2,700 men. It could be doubled by enlistment of former guardsmen within forty-eight hours. After the National Guard has been sent to the front it would be the plan of the governor to call upon the volunteers who have had considerable drill and who have a good knowledge of tactics. This would include volunteers from the college battalions at the University of Iowa, the State Agricultural college and Cornell college. Each of these battalions has tendered its service to the governor, and from them 500 well drilled men could be obtained. By using the members of these battalions to form "skeleton companies" and enlisting green men to fill up the companies a force of 2,000 men would be obtained which would require but very little drill to put them in condition for service. General James Hugh Lincoln, commandant who is considered an authority on military tactics and strategy by the authorities of the War department, has sent the governor a list of 128 well drilled men who have had several years' drill and who are anxious to serve. In tendering their service the official document says: "We respectfully ask assignment at the earliest possible date." The adjutant general has been quietly investigating the question of supplies, and in case of necessity would be able to place his orders instantly. The Western Union Tele graph company has notified the general that it is prepared to put in a telegraph office in the rooms of the adjutant general at the state house within an hour after war is declared.

Court-martial Trial of an Inmate of Soldiers' Home.

MARSHALLTOWN, Ia., April 8.-(Special.) -An unusual proceeding in the matter of disciplining a resident in the Iowa Soldier's home here was resorted to this week. For a time the home was under military dis-cipline, as it were, and a court martial held full sway over the case of one of the mem-bers, James C. Orr, who is a sergeant com-manding the Home's gun squad. The charge for which the defendant was summor fore the court-martial was that he had used defamatory language in speaking of President William McKinley. The remark came to the ears of Commandant Horton, who thought best to hold a court-martial and determine what punishment should be given the defendant. The course was soon decided upon and after due notice to Mr. Orr a court was appointed. The method of discipline was thought strange by the defendant, as he was unaware that the home was under military rule or that a court-martial had the affairs of the institution in charge He obeyed the summons, however, and ap peared at the appointed time. was quite lengthy and about twenty wit-nesses were examined, the testimony being taken by a stenographer. The finding was posted on the home's bulletin board as follows:

In the matter of the trial by court-martial, under special order No. 18, of James C. Orr, sergeant of gun squad; charged with language unbecoming a soldier and a gentleman stowards President McKinley, the court, after a fair trial and due deliberation, fourd him guilty as charged and sentenced him as follows: That he be reduced to the ranks and reprimanded by the commandant.

In approving this finding and sentence, I will say fnat while it is the privilege of any and all American citizens to criticise the official action of any official of the republic, either high or low, no language can be tolerated by a member of this home, which is unbecoming a soldier and a gentleman, or prejudicial to the good order and discipline of the institution.
