NEGLECT OF MACADAM PROVES COSTLY

Fallure to Sprinkle the Street Last Summer Results in the Ruin of the Topdressing, Which Must Be Renewed.

The condition of the macadam on Lowe Broadway is causing some concern in official circles, and also with the contractors whose guarantee has not yet expired. The fallure of the city to join with the contractor and citizens living along the street to provide for the regular sprinkling of the newly made surface until it had become solidified by wear is the cause of the trouble. During the dry, hot weather of last summer the top dressing was transformed into fice dust, and nearly all of it was carried away by the winds. This left the rougher stones and chunks of slag of which the base was constructed exposed, and at the present time the surface has lost its original smoothness and in many places it is rough and uneven. It is believed that it will be necessary to put on another layer of the material originally used for top dressing. It becomes an interesting problem as to whether the cost of this work shall be borne by the city or the contractor. The work originally cost over $10,000 and it has not been a year since it was finished. The city council saved $75 by refusing to have the street sprinkled last

Speculation of a Number of Men Ex-posed by Alderman Casper. Aldermon Casper called attention in the council meeting on Wednesday night to a species of speculating that is said to have grown into considerable proportions in recent years. He stated that a number of men had been engaged in the work of following the poil tax collector, and upon the plea that they were needy laboring men were soliciting orders from the poil tax payers with the understanding that the taxpayers were to pay them the money and permit them to work out the tax. With a majority of to work out the tax. With a majority of to work out the tax. With a majority of the people who feel inclined to pay this tax without delay or protest the appeal has had great weight, and these men have thad no difficulty in collecting a large number of these poil tax orders. The orders call for the payment of $2 in cash or two days' work John A. Frank and Miss Emma Wooten of this city were married Wednesday evening at their future home, 2312 South Sixteenth street, Rev. S. M. Perkins officiating. The wedding was witnessed by immediate friends only, and the bridal couple were the recipients of a large collection of handsome presents. A divorce has been granted to Hattie Taylor from Alfred Taylor on statutory grounds. The wife was awarded the custody of their 15-year-old daughter. Bruno Sholl was divorced from his wife Mary, whom he married in Philadelphia thirty lators, for he believed there were no men in town so mean as to try to speculate further and ask laborers to work for less than 75 cents a day.

While he was on the subject he vigorously denounced the whole poll tax system, and declared that he was in favor of abolishing it altogether and that it had cost the city more than it had turned into the treasury. No action was taken, but the matter is receiving the serious consideration of the council.

BOARD OF EDUCATION MEETS

The Board of Education held a special neeting last evening for the purpose of taking action on the bond of Treasurer George S. Davis. Mr. Davis was disappointed by the failure of the Guaranty Bonding company to fulfill its promise to furnish a bond that would meet the requirements of the state law. When the bond arrived yesterday and he ascertained that it was simply the old one returned without material changes he at once proceeded to secure a personal bond for the full amount required—$100,000—with the names of John Beresheim, W. H. M. Pusey, C. H. Huber, John Beno, John Bohoentgen and A. W. Wyman attached. Both bonds were presented to the board, but the surety obligation was rejected and the other approved. This leaves Mr. Davis with an interesting problem on his hands. He has paid the bonding company the $200 premium for his bond and see, no means of getting the money returned for the useless bond.

Superintendent Hisey called attention to the necessity for securing some additional supplementary reading matter for the pupils of the first and second grades. The matter was referred to the committee on text books with instructions to report at the regular meeting of the board on Monday night.

Member Henry reported that a large number of shade trees in the grounds around the various buildings were dead and suggested that they should be replaced. The general janitor reported that there were 200 dead trees. Estimates from responsible nurserymen showed that the trees could be replaced at a cost of $1 each. The buildings and grounds committee was directed to investigate and report at the next meeting.

Mrs. W. H. Hart's Home Lelsurely

Ransacked by Thieves . The police were advised yesterday morning that two attempts had been made to rob residences on the previous night, only one of which was successful. The residence of Mrs. H. W. Hart on Willow avenue was broken into during the night and a care-ful search made for valuables. The burglar entered the house by forcing a rear window, and evidently spent considerable time in the search, but he did his work so quietly that none of the sleeping inmates were made aware of his presence. So far were made aware of his presence. So far as could be ascertained yesterday a gold watch and chain, with a valuable charm attached, were the only articles taken. Ad-most every room in the house was visited. The residence is prominently located on the south side of Baylish park, and the grounds are well lighted by the tower and street

On the same evening an attempt was made to enter the residence of Dr. H. B. Jennings. Dr. and Mrs. Jennings were attending the Royal Arcanum ball and left their house closed with no one present. It is located near the Metcalf residence on Fourth street, and when Mr. Metcalf re-turned home after turiness hours he cur-prised a man in the act of breaking into his neighbor's house. TORPEDO BOATS AND DESTROYERS.

Difference Between Two Little Known Types of Naval Vessels, The importance attached by naval authorities to the little boats now on their way from Spain to West Indian waters is a source of astonishment to the recople who have paid no attention to recent developments in naval architecture. Torpedo boats have been popularly known for some time as war craft of potential possibilities, but in actual use more dangerous to their owners than to the enemy. Torpedo boat destroyers are apparently a type of vessel absolutely unheard of by the majority, and the manner in which they are mixed up in the news reports with the craft they are supposedly intended to annihilate is certainly mystifying.

The torpedo boat of today, it should be atated in the beginning, is no longer a vessel of doubtful value. Its terrible prowess has been shown on several occasions in recent of astonishment to the people who have paid been shown on several occasions in recent years. While it is designed primarily as a coast defense vessel, and is not especially a coast defense versel, and is not especially fitted for long voyages on the high seas, it has been made as stable and safe as any small boat can be. It can move faster than any battleship or cruiser, and, owing to its small size and low free board, can steal up within a few hundred yards of a war ship, discharge its projectile under water with considerable uccuracy and dart away without being seen, perhaps; or, if seen, can laugh at the efforts of the big vessels to capture her. The torpedoes which she sends forth on their errand of destruction are sufficiently powerful to sink any man-of-war affost if they hit the mark. The only protection that a battleship has from these terrible affort if they hit the mark. The only protection that a battleship has from these terrible little engines of war is in her guns, which, if seen in time, may sink the torpedo boat; or in the protective net of large iron rings which is hung around the ship when in danger. But the torpedo boat is so small that it is very hard to hit her even in daylight and her attacks are generally. small that it is very hard to hit her even in daylight, and her attacks are generally made at night, while the torpedo nets are of doubtful efficiency. The torpedo boats are from 100 to 180 feet long and have an average draught of about five feet, so that they can slip into shallow water or up rivers if necessary. They have a complement of from twenty to twenty-five officers and men and carry three or four one-pounder rifles for defense and as many torpedo tubes for offense.

The torpedo boat destroyer is the result of The torpedo boat destroyer is the result of the development of the torpedo boat. As its name indicates, its primary object is the destruction of torpedo boats, but it combines the qualities of the torpedo boat, the gunboat and the cruiser. It is larger and swifter than the torpedo boat, some of them rushing through the water at the rate of thirty-four miles an hour, as fast as the average express train. Besides its torpedo tubes, it carries guns of the rapid-firing variety as large as fourteen-pounders. With such speed and such armament it can run down and sink the speedlest torpedo boat, while—without using its torpedoes, which are reserved for war ships—it can capture, and destroy if necessary, commercial vessels of large size. In attacking war vessels, however, it is not as effective as the torpedo boat, because its larger size and higher free board makes it more easily seen and a better target for the guns of the battleship.
