Ford Where Buffalo Were Wont Cross the Missouri River-Tragedy of Early Days in Montana.

Away back in 1870, in the winter months or perhaps in the first month of 1871, Colonel Charles A. Broadwater of Helena, having in view the immense river traffic up the Missouri and the consequent immense profits made through that traffic, writes a Great Falls correspondent of the Anaconda Standard, conceived the idea that a line of to his brother, whom he found quite dead. Pear canyon or from Canyon Ferry to Great

The surviving brother took the sad news to the little town of Sun itiver, traveling Falls and another line of steamboats from below the great falls of the Missouri down the river to St. Louis, would be a source of great wealth and would also serve to make Helena the distributing point of Montasa in place of Fort Benton. To get around the place of Fort Benton the place of Fort B the falls in the river at this point he planned to build a railway by which goods could be portaged. At about the same time the manager of the Northern Pacific, Henry the property of the Northern Pacific, Henry the property of the Northern Pacific, Henry the property of the Northern Pacific the Pacif Villard, was planning to build a branch of that road up through the Judith basin from a point east of Billings. Each man had selected in his mind that piece of land which is now covered by the machine shops of the Great Northern, north of the Sun river and extending down the Missouri on its western bank to a point very to the present wagon bridge at First avenue north.

Fearing that he would be thwarted in his portage railway proposition, the colonel lost no time in wiring John Largent at Sun river that Russell was on his way toward what was then the station of Johnstown for the purpose of talking up the land north of the confluence of the Sun and Missouri rivers. RELEASED FROM PRISON.
The telegram added that Russell must be headed off at any cost.

In the meantime Russell had not yet reached Sun tiver. Largent dispatched Robert Lynch and Lucas Conrous to the coveted land with a load of lumber and logs for the purpose of house building and then The telegram had been received in the late afternoon; Russell arrived at the little town of Sun River in the early evening. He told Largent that he was anxious to get to Johnatown at once and asked if Largent could supply him with a guide. Nothing in the world was easier, and in a few minutes a man was found who knew the country as well as if he had made it. The man's name is forgotten now, unfortunately, but subsequent events proved that he was all right. He took Russell out over the darkening prairie and led him nearly half-way to Benton. They made a circle or two about They made a circle or two about Benton lake, sixteen miles north of this city and fully twice that distance off the direct route from Sun River. The guide was apparently imporent and Russell did not know the property of the property of the property is not the property of the pr and Russell did not know enough of the led a wild goose chase, lesting through the night. Lynch and Conrous protested that they had an overpowering desire for the land they had just taken up and nothing in the world would induce them to relinquish their holdings. There was nothing left for Russell save to was nothing to was nothing left for Russell save to was nothing left for Rus ing left for Russell save to return to Helena and report his failure to Villard. It is possible that on the homeward four ney he noticed that the distance between Johnstown and Sun River had been marvelously shortened during the morning or possibly some of the Sun River citizens gave the joke away. At any rate, it crept out and was enjoyed by the old-timers for Conrous took up 160 acres covering the where the roundhouse now stands and Lynch had the claim directly to the north and joining it. The square log house which is now standing on the west side is the cabin which Lynch put up and occupied all through the spring of 1871. Of course it is not now on its original sits. It has been moved several times, but as near as one can down the steps of a saloon. Then either because the railway schemes were dropped or because the In-dians became too troublesome they left, in-tending to return in the following spring. Lynch, however, quit the country in a lit-tle while and nothing has been heard of him since. Conrous wandered about through the state, but after a lapse of nine years he re-turned to his claim and relocated it. J. M. Matkin later jumped the Lynch claim and sold it only a few years before his death in this city, which occurred in 1890. Conrou also sold his claim later to local parties.

THE BUFFALO FORD. At a point in the Missouri river, just below the present railway bridge, was formerly a natural ford for buffalo and other game and for the Indians of this state also. Some-time ago George A. Wells, now in London, in speaking of the matter said that the first time he visited Great Falls-sometime in the '70's—he and a companion attempted to ford the river at this natural fording place. They had gone part of the way across the strea hen they were met by an enormous band of buffalo, which came down from the bluffs on the west side of the river and waded into the stream, apparently without the least fear of the strangers. They were so numerous and so determined to get across the of the San Angelo shipments have been made river that they threatened to overwhelm Mr. Wells and his friend and the latter were obliged to turn around and get back to the shore. An idea of the immense herds which were met in those days can be gained by the recalling of the fact that in the cypress hills, eighty miles north of Fort Assiniboine, there were packed in 1879 for shipment down the Missouri by way of Fort Benton 70,000 buffalo hides, and the next year $0,000 were

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 20 .- The Santa Fe overland No. 1, westbound, was held up at the Mojave river bridge, two miles west of Ora Grande, in San Bernardino county, at 2:20 o'clock this morning. Engineer Gifford was killed by one of the robbers, who was mortally wounded in an exchange of shots. The robbers flagged the train at the approach to the bridge and, boarding the engine, took the engineer and fireman back to the express car and endeavored to detach it from the first passenger coach, but could not uncouple it. They succeeded in cutting off the mail car and compelled the engineer to pull it up to the siding. Here they rifled the mail car and secured the cogistered mail. They then backed down to the train again and were proceeding to the express car, whon Engineer Gifford opened fire on them with a revolver. He fatally wounded one of the cobbers, Paul Jones of Ora Grande, but the other escaped, after shooting Gifford with a charge of buckshot. Gifford died at once. Express Messenger Mott remained on the rear platform of the express car. The train with the body of the engineer proceeded to this city. Jones-Rogers. HEBRON, Neb., April 20.-(Special.)-A SOUTH OMAHA NEWS.

The death of Edmund C. Lane, which occurred yesterday, was a great surprise to his many friends and acquaintances in this city. On April 11 Mr. Lane was taken with typhoid fever, but the attack promised to be a light one and his family and friends were not in the least alarmed. Within the last day or two dangerous symptoms appeared and complications which were entirely unexpected arose, making the case a grave one. Tuesday night the patient suffered considerably and the physicians in charge were preparing for a consultation vesterday morning when a sudden turn for the worse occurred and death resulted soon after. The deceased was born in Vermont fortyfive years ago and came to South Omaha when the town was in its infancy and has lived here ever since. An attorney by pro-fession, Mr. Lane naturally drifted into politics and has always taken a prominent part in affairs of the republican party. This spring he was prominently mentioned for mayor, but his ticket was defeated at the primaries. A widow and three children are icf: to mourn the loss of a husband and father. Deceased was a member of the Odd Fellows and the Ancient Order of United Workmen. Arrangements for the funeral are yet incomplete. Relatives in Vermont and Texas have been telegraphed for and until their arrival the final announcements will not be made.

A call has been issued for a special meet the mortgages canceled in McPherson county of Workman lodge No. 66 tonight to arduring the month of March. range for the funeral and there is some talk of holding a busines, men's meeting to draft suitable resolutions, etc.

Council Will Compromise.

Another attempt at helding a council meeting will be made tonight. From what can be learned it is inferred that a com promise has been reached and that the coun il as a whole will confirm the committees as now arranged. Quite an amount of bus ineso is being delayed on account of the deadlock and city officials are anxious for settlement of some sort in order routine matters may be taken up and disposed of. The Twenty-slath street grading matter is one of the most important and is forcing itself just now as the contractors are about through and are waiting for final instructions. No action has as yet been taken on the request of the Burlington for the use of an alley in the Fourth ward and until the request is granted no work will be done on the proposed cooperage factory. It is understood that the mayor will recommend in his message that steps be taken immediately to compel the railroads to pay for past repairs on the viaducts.

There is some talk of moving the electric street light now located at Twenty-fifth and M streets. It is understood that some mem-bers of the council favor moving this light to another locality. The people living in this neighborhood are up in arms and assert that there will be trouble in case an at tempt to move the light is made. that they were compelled to wait a year fo the light after it had been petitioned for on account of there being no funds to mee the additional expense, and now they propose to see that the lamp stays where it is Some of the residents go so far as to say they will obtain an injunction in case the council attempts to rob them of the light.

Want People to Clean Up. Inspector Carrolf will recommend that the council take steps, to compel the owners of flats in different parts of the city to clean up the premises at least once a year. The inspector says that when he calls at such places to notify tenants to clean up they invariably tell him that they have just moved in and are preparing to move out. In both cases there is a refusal to comply with the demands of the health department Street Commissioner Ross complains about the amount of paper which is thrown into the streets. He asserts that this paper is washed into the catch basins and clogs them so that storm water is not properly carried off. Merchants should, he thinks, be prohibited from throwing sweepings into the

Out of the 105 samples tested last month all were above standard, the average being 4½ per cent of butter fat. The highest test showed 5 per cent and the lowest 3½ per cent. was destroyed by fire this afternoon. The Baptist chapel, known as Spurgeon's tabernacle, or the Metropolitan tabernacle, to give it its proper name, was situated at Newington Butts, close to the Elephant and Castle, in the southern part of London, known as the Surrey side of the River Thames. It was opened in 1861 and was made famous by Rev. Charles Haddon Spurgeon, who died in 1892. The tabernacle had about thirty mission halls and schools, in addition to alms houses connected with it. Rev. Thomas Spurgeon, brother of the distinguished divine is the paster of the Metropolitan tabernacle baving occupied that position since 1894.

"History vs Fiction"

"In fiction the principles are given to find the facts; in history the facts are given to find the principles,"-Macaulay.

The historian who does not explain the facts as well as state them performs only one-half his office. To tell not only what happened, but why it happenedto find the principles is the philosophy of history-the most valuable and interesting part.

In this particular no record of the human race and its manifold achievements compares with that scholarly and fascinating production,

Ridpath's History of the World

To note how clearly historical lessons are deducted from historical facts it is only necessary to read the story of any action as told by Dr. Ridpath. These essons are drawn from actual human experiences and are therefore the greatest value in the affairs of life. The work therefore becomes a great teacher which enables us to apply the ssons of the past to our own affairs.
