Thousands Turn Out to Bid Farewell to the Young Men Who Are Headed for the Cuban Battlefields.

Council Bluffs was awakened yesterday morning at 6 o'clock by an uproar that was heard in all parts of town and made sleep impossible for any but the deaf. According to announcement every bell and steam whistle in the city gave forth its loudest notes an hour and a half before the Dodge Light Guards were to leave the depot, to work; good wages; no children. Apply Mrs. give the people amole time to join in the escort from the armory to the Book Island. depot. It was not definitely known until nearly 11 o'clock at night that the company would start at 7:45 and then couriers were sent all over town to awaken the custodions of the bells and whistles and other means of making noises. At midnight Captain L. B. Cousins sank into a chair in the armory and wearily remarked: "Can any of you boys think of any other means of making a noise in the morning that I have not arranged

At the early hour fixed for the departure of the train there was a crowd of people around the depot that filled the streets for When the guards left their armory a crowd of several thousand people had congregated in the vicinity. In this crowd were nearly all of the friends and relatives of the young men and they marched with them to the station. Mothers, brothers, sisters and fathers marched by the side of their loved ones. It was a singular fact that a large proportion of the young men were sons of widows, and the spectacle of the mothers wearing full mourning marching by the side of their boys lent a feeling of inexpressible sadness to the scene that robbed it of the gatety that many of the boys had endeavored to throw around it. Smiles gave way to tears and more than one voice that tried to cheer was choked with emotion. At the head of the process on were bands of music playing patriotic airs, but only the snare drums and the screaming fifes gave it the military air that was suggested by the gleaming guns that flashed in the morning sunshine as the boys swung along with sturdy strides. The young soldiers filed into the coaches ofter reaching the station, many of them apparently reluctant to say the last words in parting with friends where the eyes of the vast multitude could discern all. In an instant every window was filled with a blue uniform, the handshakes and cheers were given as the train slowly pulled out through the narrow living avenue that lined up on each side. There was a great scramble of citizens to get on board, and when the train left the station it was loaded with friends of the young men. Many of these continued on until Des Moines was reached but the majority dropped off at stations down the line and returned on the incoming morning

At all points along the line there were At all points along the line there were great demonstrations. An especial effort was made by the people of Neola and vicinity, and nearly all of the people in the township were at the train. Among the crowd on the train were a large number of runaway boys, who sought to make the trip to Des Moines in the hope that by some means they would be permitted to enlist. Captain Pryor went through the train and picked out the youngest of these and had them put off at the first station. Many of them had to walk back.

Applications for enlistment were made as late as 1 o'clock yesterday morning, and the rigid physical examinations were made by Dr. Barstow. vide for Mrs. Rogers' Needs. Mrs. Mary Rodgers, a frail and careworn woman, aged 42 years, was brought in on the Northwestern train yesterday from Loveland, where she had been taken into custody upon the charge of insanity. Accompanying her were several witnesses, who were ready to testify to her strange conduct. She was taken to the county jail by the police patrol wagon and during the afternoon was brought before the Commis for the Insane. Her own story and that told by the witnesses were rather ex-traordinary and failed utterly to convince the board that she was insane. Mrs. John Currie was the chief witness. She said the woman appeared at her home, which is a farmhouse, early yesterday morning and in-quired the way to Council Bluffs. The woman was walking and according to Mrs. Currie gave unmistakable evidence of an un-balanced mind. Mrs. Currie alleged that she replied to the query in a civil manner and that the strange woman became very abusive and angry, so much so that she be-came alarmed and called her husband. With great deal of feeling and with no indication that she was of unsound mind. She said she was in search of a relative, a Mrs. May, whose home is in South Omaha, and that being destitute and without money she had walked all the way from her former home in St. Peters, Minn. She told a long story of her troubles and the fearful hardships she had endured on the long journey. The board gave an order for her temporary care until she could secure a rest and ascertain definitely the location of her relatives.
