and married in the service, and, therefore, have not been schooled in the wretchedness of parting. The young officers who, within the last few years, have taken guis from civil life for wives, are in for the most difficulty in the matter of departing from their homes the elderly wives of the old-time officers are the comforts of these women. For example, a captain in the navy was ordered a few days ago to the command of one of the new cruisers. His wife sent him, then a young master's mate, away to battle in 1861. One of her sons is a lieutenant in the artillery, and he is now with his battery in the Department of the South. Another of her sons, an ensign in the navy, is attached to one of the ships at Key West. This naign married a young woman with no service connections a few months ago and the young wife is living with her mother-in-law in Washington. It is not likely that she will fall to partake of the fortitude so strongly exhibited under the present circums'ances by the mother of her husband. There are many similar cases. The wives and families of officers of the army and navy do not manifest outward dis-

In general it may be said that the wives of officers in the United States service have a trying time of it. This is especially true of the wives of naval officers. The army women ere excites the wonder of civilian women are subjected to any amount of the discomwho number "service" women among their friends. In Washington there are hundreds of women, the wives of public officials, who are showing a great deal of anxiety over the wives of the naval officers do not, for the strength of the str

If they marry within the service—as perhaps seven in ten of them do—their pay, which is not pirticularly liberal, for the daughters of the older officers very tasking the case. Rows of American army posts are at present terming with excitement, but they are not overspread with grief.

"Me Dinny'll be good, more power t' th' arrum av him, fur a million av th' blackhearted omadhouns!" reid the laundress wife of an artillery sergeant at the arse al here the other day, and she expressed the spirit of all her listers.

ever been able to afford. ECONOMY NECESSARY.

The young naval officer who gets mirried on his pay is bound to create a skimpy time for himself. His personal expense account must be kept down to the smallest possible limit and he is obliged to watch he mess bills with a careful eye to prevent them from running up on him after the mysterious manner of mess bills. Most of the naval officers send three-fourths of their pay home to their families and it does not require to their families and it does not require. that the remaining one-quarter of his monthly money is a small enough sum out of which to keep himself in fresh, spick and-span uniforms, quit even with the meas caterer from month to month and rig him-self out in suitable musti at frequent intervals for shore visiting, to say nothing of entertaining friends on board in return for shore entertainment. When the time ar-rives for the married naval officer to send his children to school he simply has to lop off mest of the little comforts of the messroom and of the shore or he will find him-self in a very pinching predicament.

There are many United States naval offi-cers and the number is constantly growing, who make it a point to have their families within reaching distance, no matter in what part of the world they are serving. This, of course, is not possible in the case of large families, but the number of young wives of naval officers who live at the headquarters of the foreign stations is considerable. There are colonies of them at Yokohama, at Nice, at Buenos Ayres, and at various other considerable ports on the for-eign stations. The naval officers have dis-•1:30 am covered that they can quite as well afford to bave their wives near them as to have them remain in the United States during their absence for several years on foreign cruis-ers, and there is a growing disposition among them to take advantage of the dis-

He was practically certain of the identity of the men engaged in the robery and knew that they expected a much larger sum than that obtained. Two days afterward one of the men approached and, after condoling with him upon his loss, casually inquired how much money had been taken. "A mere triffe," was the response; "about $700 was all the thieves secured." The inquisitive man went away and a couple of "about $700 was all the thieves secured." The inquisitive man went away and a couple of hours later there was as pretty a three-handed fight as one would want to see in progress on the main street. The inquisitive man had become satisfied that the thief who had done the work bad held out $500, told the other man about it and the two promptly proceeded to beat up their companion in crime in a shocking way for not splitting up the amount taken in proper proportions. His protests were of no avail, for had not the actual loser admitted that $700 had been taken?" $700 had been taken?"
