

AMUSEMENTS.

The regular theatrical season is so nearly at its last gasp that it seems an unnecessary courtesy to wait until the final breath is out of its body before laying it away to rest and calling the episode closed.

A few possible benefit performances, a week of school commencement and perhaps one or two legitimate attractions working their more or less weary way back from the coast, and the regular season of 1894-5 will be over in Omaha.

At this point in the year, midway between the regular and the supplementary seasons, it may not be amiss to briefly review the theatrical year just closed, to compare it with other similar periods, and to draw hope, if possible, from any lesson it may convey.

At Harper's Ferry, in that it has won in apparent defeat the seeds of certain victory, which will assuredly burst forth into perfect flower in time to come.

For sixteen years Frederick Ward has been recognized as one of the foremost actors of the country; he has won the respect and admiration of the public by his devotion to his profession and fidelity to the Shakespearean and legitimate drama.

Blanche Walsh has joined the Columbus Theater Stock company. Coquelin may appear in London this summer as Cyrano de Bergerac.

It is related of a certain prominent actor, who stars in a well known "pastoral idyll," and who is as partial at times to the flowing bowl as he is at others to occupying liberal plumes.

Coming Events. "O'Brien, the Contractor," is not only a strong and extremely realistic play, but in the character of "O'Brien," Mr. Daniel Sully has added another character that will live long in the minds of the theater-going public.

first time in this city during two performances next Sunday at Boyd's, is said to be full of bright and witty dialogue, pretty songs and dances, and to be presented by a company of well known and capable people.

The play for the coming week at the Creighton is to be a marked change from this week's bill, being the lively and entertaining comedy, "What Happened to Smith."
