FIRST IS READY TO MARCH

Official Notification of Fact Sent to the War Department.

ORDER TO MOVE EXPECTED ANY MOMENT

Unnecessary Equipment and Baggage to Be Sent Home—Companies Will Be Inspected Previous to Starting.

LINCOLN, May 13.—(Special Telegram.)—The War department was notified this morning of the readiness of the First regiment to start on an hour's notice. In the meantime Colonel Pratt has issued the following order, copies of which are posted at the headquarters of each company of the regiment:

1. The First regiment will hold itself in readiness to proceed by train to destination hereafter to be decided upon.
2. All necessary preparations will be made for the return of unauthorized and uniform clothing or other baggage to their homes.
3. The following will be allowed to be carried by each enlisted man: One uniform complete, one extra suit of underclothing, one pair field shoes, two pair socks, two towels, hair brush, comb, soap, one blanket, poncho and half shelter tent, besides haversack and canteen, rifle and bayonet. No ammunition will be carried enroute. Campaign hats will be worn.

Previous to breaking camp at the hour to be designated hereafter there will be inspection of companies under arms by regimental commandant. Each company commander will make an exact inventory of government tentage in their hands and report to regimental quartermaster before noon today.

The actual order to move had not been received from the War department at noon, but was expected at any moment. The forenoon was spent by the First regiment boys in drawing their clothing and preparing for the expected march.

Waiting for the Word.
No word was received from Washington during the afternoon to relieve the state of suspense as to probable marching orders. Very little was accomplished in the way of drill, as the time was spent in the issuance of the new clothing and equipment. The list of supplies received is as follows: 1,500 woolen blankets, 1,235 campaign hats, 907 pairs of leggings, 3,600 pairs undershirts and drawers, 1,500 pairs calfskin shoes, 3,900 pairs cotton socks and 1,425 pairs pantaloons.

Among the officers of the camp today the opinion was expressed that the approaching crisis in the West Indies would cause a delay in the marching orders, and that both regiments would remain in camp for some time yet.

The railroad companies have arranged to run excursions from every direction next Sunday if the news here, and it is expected that the crowd will be larger even than the one of last Sunday.

The volunteer soldiers are allowed to draw $63 worth of clothing a year. If they are careful and draw less than that amount they are given credit and draw the balance in cash. If a man draws over that amount of clothing during the year the extra expense is deducted from his pay.

Culver's Troop in Camp.
Troop A, the cavalry company from Milford, came into the camp at 3:30 this afternoon, and their advent caused considerable excitement and enthusiasm. The troop consists of eighty men, about forty mounted, the others following closely behind on four wagons which also contained the extra equipment of the troops. The mounted detachment was pretty well drilled and performed some evolutions in its progress through the camp.

The officers of troop A are J. H. Culver, captain; W. S. Kenney, first lieutenant and A. E. Culver, second lieutenant. The men are armed with sabres and carbines. The horses brought into camp are a hardy looking lot of animals.

The Milford troop was organized and mustered into the National Guard in 1887, and during ten years its uniform strength has been about forty men. The call for actual service has necessitated the enlistment of forty new men, and these recruits are not yet fully equipped. The troop has been assigned to the Third United States Volunteer Cavalry. The commanding officer of the regiment appointed a surgeon to make the physical examination of the men, and during this week the examinations were held at Milford. The order to proceed to Camp Saunders for physical examination by the board here caused considerable complaint among the men, who thought that the examinations were coming too often. The troop proceeded to the camp according to orders, but on its arrival a protest was made against the jurisdiction of the board, the men having already been examined and the commissions of the officers issued. The protest was not allowed to delay the matter of examination and within an hour of the arrival here Culver's company marched into the building occupied by the medical board. In the examination nine of Culver's men were rejected. Most of these had been condemned by the examining surgeon at Milford and their rejection today was expected, so that the second examination is in the main satisfactory. The officers of the troop took their examination tonight. The officers of troop A successfully passed the physical examination tonight.

An explanation is made tonight of the rejection of Captain Baldwin of the Nelson company. When the list of rejected men was given out Baldwin's name did not appear. He having successfully passed the physical examination. A day or two later it is said his wife came to Lincoln, went before the board and said that her husband was afflicted with heart trouble. She was very anxious to keep him from going into the army, and on her representation a new examination was held, which resulted in his rejection. This occurred after his commission had been issued. Frank D. Eager, who is promoted to the place, was first lieutenant of Company D, First regiment, two weeks ago, and this is his second promotion since the troops entered upon camp life. The explanation of the rapid rise of Eager is that he is the publisher of a popular newspaper of some state circulation and has rendered some services to the governor that are now being repaid. The fitness of the officers of the Nelson company for promotion does not seem to have been considered. The friends of the governor claim that no political favoritism is being shown, but they are unable to show any other grounds for the rapid elevation of Eager, Corcoran of York, Senator Allen's son, and many others, all of whom are given better places at the expense of other men who were first in line for promotion.

Sauveterous Cattle Shipment.
SCHUYLER, Neb., May 13.—(Special Telegram.)—Stockmen of Schuyler and vicinity are quite exercised over the matter of shipment of a carload of cattle from Lambert siding, four miles west of Schuyler, last night by a shipper who claimed he fed the cattle in the neighborhood six or eight miles northwest of here, but who it is positively declared is not known by the feeders of this vicinity. The cattle were kept at Lambert siding all day, having been sent early in the morning, and while the man claims the cattle were in the district north of the track no tracks were found to show that they came from the north. As soon as the billing at Schuyler and loading at Lambert were called to the attention of stockmen here they became suspicious and notified Omaha commission men, which was done just in time, as the cattle had arrived in South Omaha and an advance of $400 had been asked for.

LINCOLN, May 13.—(Special.)—The stockmen from over the state held a meeting in the university chapel last night to consider matters relative to the live stock exhibition to be made at the exposition. C. H. Elmendorf, president of the association, reported that the committee appointed to confer with the state commission had only been able to secure $2,000 out of the $100,000 appropriation made by the legislature. All members present agreed that this was a very niggardly sum and the committee was instructed to work further with the commission, in the hope of a larger appropriation. It was finally agreed that of the $2,000 $1,000 be divided among cattle, $1,000 among swine, $500 among horses and $300 among sheep. The remaining $200 was set aside to pay the necessary expenses of working up exhibits and committees were appointed to rush things along. Considerable satisfaction was expressed at the action of the Transmississippi Exposition association in voting $35,000 in cash premiums for live stock.
