MAZE OF BRIGHT AND PATRIOTIC COLOR

Decorative Scheme Magnificent in Conception and Carried Out with Great Fidelity as to Detall and Consistency,

The decoration of the interior of the Government building has been completed and the handsome effect produced by the harmonious arrangement of color is the subject of flattering comment on the part of the few visitors who have been privileged to enter the building. The members of the board of managment are greatly pleased with the result, several of them declaring that the decoration of the interior, like the building itself, is far superior to any previous effort in that direction in former ex-

Before the decorators commenced their work, the building presented the appearance of an immense warehouse, the side walls being "sheathed" with wide boards, and the view from any point being broken by huge columns supporting the great roof trusses. The dome was a vision of bare boards, reaching to a height of 150 feet above the floor This is all changed now, and on every side the eye beholds the beautiful colors of "Old Glory" arranged against a pleasing background of marcon and old gold. The trusses are hidden from view, the column are covered with pleasing shadows of cloth and the yawning dome is changed to a burs; of color, which forms a fitting climax in the elaborate scheme. The side walls are covered to a height of twelve feet, with maroon-colored burlap, and from this point to the ceiling the unsightly boards are covered with burlap of the natural color. A neat moulding in black covers the joining of these colors. The roof trusses are hidden from view by graceful festoons of maroon and old gold cloth. Each massive post is covered with burlap, the joining of the colors being marked by a handsome mould-

At the crown of each of the trusses marking the commencement of the wings at either side of the central mass of the building is a "trophy" consisting of two twentytwo foot flags, two twelve-foot flags and two eight-foot flags, artistically arranged and draped, and in the center of this beautiful background appears a large American eagle, with wings extended and grasping in his talons the olive branch and bunch of arrows. At the crown of each of the other trusses is a similar "trophy" without the eagle. On each column supporting the roof trusses a trophy of smaller flags is arranged at the moulding heretofore men-

Under the Dome.

The arrangement of the dome is the crowning feature of the beautiful decoration. The bare boards forming the sides of the dome have disappeared behind a covering of burlap of the natural color and the lofty crown appears in a blaze of red and white draped in the most artistic fashion. The broad bands of red and white extend from the outer circle to the center and are draped in such a manner that the result must be seen to be appreciated. A frieze of blue around the outer circle completes the tri-color and serves to cover the method of fastening. At the base of the dome trophies of flags are draped entirely around the great circle, the group opposite the main defendants from exhibiting camels and donkeys as a feature of their show. The State department is immediately beneath the dome opposite the main entrance to the building and above this adding to neath the dome opposite the main chitages to the building, and above this, adding to the general effect of the decoration, is the seal of the United States, surmounted by seal of the United States, surmounted by that therefore the local courts have no juris-

The myriad prisms application under advisement and pass upon forming this light have been polished until it at a later date. they are without a spot or speck of dust and the beautiful colors of the decoration are reflected from their polished sides in thousands of rays.

It may interest the statistically inclined to know that 6,600 yards of burlap were used night, ordered a continuance until next in covering the walls of the building, and the interior of the dome and 4,200 yards of cotton cloth were required to make the festoons which are draped on the roof trusses. The covering of the side walls of the dome required 1,200 yards of burlap and 1,400 yards of bunting were used in forming the decoration at the summit.

A ROYAL FAMILY. On visiting west Midway a few days ago attention was attracted by a terrific roar of a lion coming from the interior of the colossal building occupied by the Wild Animal Show. On arriving at the entrance it was on account of change in style of case, every shop-worn instrument, every rented plane returned, even if out but one month; every used instrument, every new plane or organ however slightly damaged, without regard ascertained that a royal reception was beto original cost or profit. Among this fine stock are makes of national reputation whose high standing is unquestioned.

ert. After wandering through a perfect labarinth of cages filled with rare, curious and savage denisons of the forest, the crowd at last arrived safely in front of a large cage containing the Royal Family. With the caution to stand back the keeper unbolted the door to the cage. As he did so there was an ominous growling, and the door was struck violently from within. The door swung open, and the interior was re-vealed from which four huge eyes like balls of fire glared at them. Talk about your menageries; no prettier sight was ever wit-nessed than those two magnificent desert born Algerian lions. Then Sadrack, with another defiant look at the intruders, who, by the way, could feel the cold chills running up and down their spinal columns drew himself up like a buck at gaze, and roared until the earth shook. The pair was Sadrack and Queen, who are the only Algerian lions ever imported; they being much larger and more savage than any other African lion. Notwithstanding the fact that they are very savage beasts, that strange element, mother's love, predominates in the emale, and Queen guards her young as jealously as ever a human mother could. The baby lions are about the size of a half-grown cat, of tawny yellow color, with light stripes or dapples. They will undoubtedly prove t great attraction to the sight-seeing public This menagerie embraces hundreds of ant

The book consists of nearly 200 pages of views made by E. H. Hart, naval photographer, and the list of subjects embraces everything of interest pertaining to our navy, of which every American is justly proud. First within the covers of this interesting work comes a man sixteen times as esting work comes a map sixteen times as as the book itself, showing on side the Spanish possessions, and all adlacent territory, while on the other side the East Indian possessions are similarly treated. Steamship lines, with the disances intervening between different points, are shown, and a close study of these maps will give one a thorough understanding of this territory, in regard to which the in-terest of the American public is now at

Then follow more than 200 rare pictures of the navy, its officers and equipment. The views are all authentic, and are the latest official photographs of our torpedo boats, boat destroyers, cruisers. ships, gunboats, monitors, rams, dynamite cruisers, dispatch vessels, and other war portrayal of the American navy as it exists today. A complete description of the construction, displacement, size, speed, teries, armor, crew and cost of each boat will enable the reader to form an accurate estimate of our fighting strength. Included with these are photographs of the leading Spanish men-of-war, also fully described. By far the most interesting portions of the book are views of the Maine, taken before the disaster in Havana harbor, showing the life and discipline aboard a battleship, to-gether with portraits of the officers and crew, supplemented by photographs taken after the explosion, depicting the divers at work, and other incidents in connection with this sad and memorable event.
