Commencement Day at the University of Nebraska.

CLOSE OF ITS MOST PROSPEROUS YEAR

Dr. Lyman Abbott Delivers a Stirring Address on "New Dutles of the New Hour"-Names of Those Graduated.

June 9 .- (Special.) -The twenty-seventh annual commencement of the University of Nebraska, which occurred at the Oliver theater this morning, marked the close of a most prosperous year for the institution, and the beginning of life's battle for more than 200 graduates, who today received diplomas from their alma mater. Shortly after 9 o'clock the university procession composed of the alumni, seniors, masters, doctors and the faculty, and headed by the cadet band, formed on the campus and marched to the theater. Here they were greeted by an enthusiastic audience that packed the building from pit to gallery. On every side were to be seen the scarlet. On every side were to be seen the scarlet Herbert Silas Evans, Stella; William George and cream of the university, entwined with Kinton, Stella; Alvin Augustus Miller, Linthe stars and stripes. All of the candidates for degrees together with the faculty and Board of regents occupied seats upon the Brown Sawyer, Lincoln; Charles Henderson

The program opened with "The Stars and Stripes Forever," played by Prof. Hagenow's full orchestra. Prayer was offered by Rev. Mr. Manss of the First Congregational The commencement oration by Dr. Lyman Abbott of New York, is said by many to have been the best address ever listened to by a Lincoln audience. In introducing B. Sc., S6, the University of Wisconsin, Lin-the speaker Chancellor MacLean said "it coln; Raymond Servius Baker, A. B., "97, the speaker Chancellor MacLean said, "it is fitting that in this progressive university, of a progressive state, in the most progressive nation on earth, that Dr. Lyman Abbott, a Prophet of Progress and a Lover of Mankind, address you.' He needs no introduc

Dr. Abbott on Our Duties. Dr. Abbott took for his theme "New Du ties of the Hour," and spoke in part as fol-

What are our duties? Character and the opportunities of the hour combine to determine our duties and we must be willing and able to grasp them. New events make new duties. Abraham Lincoln was confronted with a situation that carried with it great responsibility, but his strength of character carried him through. The American people have several distinguishing characteristics. In common with every other nation on the globe we have many vices. These are not American, but belong to mankind in general. With possibly the exception of England, the American government is the least corrupt in the world. One distinguishing characteristic of this nation is self-government. The American hypothesis is that every man is better able to take care of himself than any other man is to do it for him. The fountain source of power is the people. In enforcing laws force is only used when conscience fails. Another thing that sets us apart from other nations is the equality of our people There is no caste; none are born prince or pauper, but all are born Americans. You may occupy any place if you can but reach it. Although this, our ideal, has not yet been reached, we are nearer to it than any other people.

Our unparalleled system of education is another distinguishing mark. Our free education does not stop with the "three R's." The public school system is the only example of a gree; people engaged in their own higher education. Again, we guarantee to every comer free religious privileges. We have all kinds of religion and irreligion, but are the only people on the earth who have nothing approximating a church of state. No church is either helped or hindered by the state. The teachings of Robert Ingersoll, much as we deplore them, serve to illustrate how free is speech in America. Ever hospitable, we extend a hand of welcome to who ever comes and in six months give him the privileges that are withheld from our own sons until they have lived here twenty-one years. This policy may not be wise, but it is distinctly American. The present crisis teaches us that not only may we welcome people to our shores, but that America must take her place among the nations of the earth in every clime and under every sun, to the end that justice shall be proclaimed throughout the world.

throughout the world Lesson Taught by Dewey.

The guns of Dewey have convinced us that there are no hemispheres. We are one This is the most necessary, just and righteous war that ever was fought. If the tim ever comes when conscience and reason rule and men do right of their own volition, war will be unnecessary, but we have not yet reached that state. Wherever England goes better governments are set up. Not so with Spain. She has been a robber for over 300 years, taking everything from her colonists and giving them nothing in return. When the Maine exploded we waked to the situation and now as a nation we are laying down our life that another people may live. The story of Daniel in the lion's den is not more marvellous than that other story that flashed over the wires a few days ago when Hobson and his brave men went into the very jaws of death and came out unscathed.

The orchestra selection following was a group of American national airs, a fitting compliment to the address just finished. Chancellor MacLean then conferred degrees upon graduates presented by deans of the different departments and presented them with diplomas. Degrees were conferred upon twenty members of the class who are absent with the two Nebraska regiments. Their diplomas were wrapped in a silken flag and placed on a bed of flowers with the prayer "God grant they may all return." In a short speech Governor Holcomb commissioned seventeen university cadets as second lieutenants. The announcement was made that ninty seven university students had enlisted in the First and Second Nebraska regiments and that so far as could be learned twenty former graduates had enlisted and that no doubt there were many more. Those who were given degrees today were:

We aim

To place our tailoring above the evils of fancy high prices for credit, and "shoddy" at deceptive cheapness.

The suit you order from us at $25 and $30 will bear the same close critical inspection as regards workmanship, trimmings and fitting, as the $40 or $45 production of the credit tailor. There's no difference except the price.

If you are enconomically inclined, ask the salesman to show you the $15, $18 and $20 suitings. These fabrics have been selected with great care, and are in every way adapted to the requirements of the most exacting dresser.

The fitting of these garments will be as accurate as that of the higher priced garments.

All garments made in Omaha—by Omaha tailors.

Illustrated Opening Day Edition.

The eyes of the world are now on Omaha.

The Trans-Mississippi and International Exposition has opened its gates and every citizen of this city and state must constitute himself a committee of one to acquaint his friends out of the city with the beauty and extent of the exposition.

To facilitate the spreading of this information, The Bee has issued a superb illustrated edition entirely worthy of the opening day. It gives a history of the exposition, half-tone engravings of the buildings, portraits of the men whose hard work, energy and genius have made the exposition a grand success from a standpoint of architecture, art and science.

You can help to make it a success financially by sending a copy of this splendid edition to your friends outside of the city.
