

CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR

Hon. Ben S. Baker Endorsed by Douglas County Republicans.

CONVENTION UNANIMOUS IN HIS SUPPORT

Delegates Instructed to Use All Honorable Means to Secure the Nomination of the Omaha Man.

The republican convention yesterday afternoon, called to select delegates to the state convention at Lincoln, August 19, was not over largely attended, but was one of the most harmonious political gatherings ever called together in this county. It resulted in Hon. B. S. Baker being allowed to select the delegation in the interest of his candidacy for governor, his choice being ratified by the convention.

It was 3 o'clock before Chairman Williams of the republican county central committee convened the meeting in Washington hall. After stating the object of the convention, Chairman Williams said that in some quarters he had been criticised for calling the convention at such an early date. The attendance, however, he contended, showed that he had done the correct thing, and that there was no justification for the criticism.

Mr. Chaffee spoke of the good work accomplished by the republican party and paid a glowing tribute to the administration of President McKinley, after which Secretary Tuttle read the call. The call of the delegates in attendance and no contests. J. G. Kuhn was elected assistant secretary and all delegates declared entitled to seats.

John C. Wharton asked the indulgence of the convention to make application, and announced that in his judgment Douglas county was entitled to the honor of placing a candidate in nomination for a place at the head of the state ticket. The man that he had in view, he said, was Hon. Benjamin S. Baker. After another round of applause the following resolutions, introduced by Mr. Wharton, were adopted by a unanimous vote.

Whereas, The republicans of Douglas county, in convention assembled, believe it to be for the best interest of the state to have a republican party in this state and for the best interests of the state that the nominee for governor of the state of Nebraska come from Douglas county; and

Resolved, That the distinguished ability of Hon. Benjamin S. Baker and his unblemished record, both in public and private life, is a recommendation for him for the high and responsible position of governor of this state, and that therefore the choice and will of this convention may be conveyed and carried out in the state convention, be it.

Resolved, That no proxies be allowed from this county in said state convention, and in case of vacancy in said delegation the said Benjamin S. Baker is hereby authorized to select such republicans as he may see fit to fill such vacancies, and at said state convention the vote of all absentees, if any, shall be cast by said chairman of said Douglas county delegation.

The adoption of the resolutions was followed by calls for Mr. Baker, who upon appearing upon the rostrum was loudly applauded. In addressing the convention he said that he regarded the action of the convention as expressed in the resolution as one of the greatest compliments that could be paid to any man. If nominated and elected he would give the people of the state a clean and honest administration. He saw victory ahead and expressed the opinion that the republican ticket, if good men were placed in nomination, would be elected from top to bottom. He denounced fraud and declared it a dead issue so far as politics were concerned.

Selecting the Delegates. At this point in the proceedings a recess of fifteen minutes was taken during which the list of delegates was prepared and by Mr. Baker. Upon reconvening the following names were presented:

Delegates at large: H. H. Baldrige, chairman; W. F. Gurley, Casper E. Vost, J. H. Miller, E. Bierbower, G. R. Williams, R. S. Berlin, Charles H. Bruns, R. H. White, J. A. Gillespie, Dan H. Wheeler, Sr., Bruce McCulloch, George McBride, John Butler.

Hon. John L. Webster was called to the front and responded to the demands for a speech, after which the convention adjourned.

Trans-Mississippi and International Exposition

Omaha, June to November, 1898.

Notwithstanding the lack of equipment, the regiment drills regularly every day. It has been found that the climate here disagrees with horses brought here from the north and several sold the horses of Grigsby's command have died and others are dying daily. The affection seems to be congestion of the lungs. The horses of the whole brigade are similarly affected.

Colonel Grigsby's will arrive here this week from South Dakota to visit his husband. The trial of Henry E. Boorman of troop H, Sixth United States cavalry, by court-martial, was held in Colonel Grigsby's tent today. Boorman is charged with forcibly taking possession of a mule that belonged to another trooper. The trial was not completed today.

Major Fisher assumed his duties as chief surgeon of the regiment today. Colonel Grigsby's regiment drew ten days' rations today. It required twenty-three mules to haul the supplies from the depot to the camp. Two expert bookkeepers and six men are kept busy looking after the accounts of the subsistence department. Among the more important supplies drawn by the regiment today were 12,500 pounds of fresh beef, 7,500 pounds of bacon, 11,200 pounds of fresh bread, 1,500 pounds of beans, 10,000 pounds of potatoes, 8,000 pounds of tomatoes, 800 pounds of roasted coffee.

The non-commissioned officers of the regiment encamped themselves today. Adjutant Otto L. Sues will hereafter be in charge of the commissioned officers' mess. Commissary stores have been established in the brigade to which Colonel Grigsby's regiment belongs and all kinds of business supplies are sold to the men at wholesale rates and the purchases are charged against the pay accounts of the regiment. Lieutenant O. W. McMichael has been placed in charge of the brigade commissary store. This arrangement is very much appreciated by Colonel Grigsby's men, as they can buy their supplies right in camp as cheaply as elsewhere and he get credit on purchases until they are paid off.

Major Fisher, surgeon of the regiment, reports that there is but little sickness and none seriously ill. Mr. Stewart will leave Friday for Cincinnati to purchase several horses for the private use of members of the regiment.

Militia is still on guard. The militia is still on guard. The Payne plant, the only one operating, starts on today with a slightly increased crew. The other manufacturers have posted notices that their plants will be reopened today. Some of the business men are inclined to criticize Governor Schell for announcing an intention to recall the militia to Milwaukee for the carnival exercises next Tuesday. The authorities are trying to find a way to permit the arrest of Thomas I. Kidd, F. J. Weber and Richard Braunsweig, three lead-mine dealers, who are alleged to be indirectly responsible for the rioting.

Alaska Indians Recent Intrusion. A party of Alaska Indians, led by a man named Wash, June 25, On Friday last an Indian party belonging to a Chinook band of Sticks fled two shots from ambush at Jack Dalton, the narrow-gauge engineer. All the details of the shooting show it to have been a carefully planned attempt to assassinate the man whom the Indians hold responsible for the influx of whites into their country.

Prefer Hearing to Work. Hutchingson, Kan., June 25.—Hutchingson and other towns along the Santa Fe road are flooded with armies of unemployed men. A train loaded with laborers from Los Angeles has arrived here and every kitchen door in town is hourly besieged by men begging for food. Most of them refer to work in the harvest fields for the present wages, $2 to $3 a day.

Accessory Gets Off Easy. NORRISTOWN, Pa., June 25.—Lizzie De Kalb, the notorious woman in black, today pleaded guilty to the charge of being accessory after the fact in connection with the murder of Mrs. Emma P. Kaiser and was sentenced to two years in jail by Judge Wood.

CATCH THE COUNTERFEITERS

Special Agent Donella and Assistant Land One Gang Entirely.

McCarthy outfit is now in jail. Well Planned Raid is Carried Out with No Hit and a Neat Cleanup of the Crooks is the Result.

By a ruse the entire gang of counterfeiters known as the "McCarthy gang" has been captured. A large quantity of bogus silver dollars and almost a complete outfit of moulds and tools used in the making of the coin were also captured. The capture was made in the saloon of Frank Deagan at Twenty-fourth and F streets, South Omaha. The men were taken entirely by surprise and when the officers surrounded them with drawn revolvers did not attempt to make a resistance. The gang, of which Vic McCarthy was once the recognized head, consists now of John McCarthy, John Brown, Charles Schartow and Isaac Beadle. All of them, together with Mrs. McCarthy and her daughter, are in cells at the city jail.

The gang was decoyed into Deagan's saloon by Special Agent Donella, who for a week past as a dealer in bogus money. Friday Donella, who had made numerous trips to the home of McCarthy, a street situated on a card table in a deal for the purchase of $50 worth of coin, he to receive twelve bogus dollars for every good dollar he invested.

The money was to be delivered at Deagan's saloon. The plan works like oil. At 8 o'clock Saturday morning, accompanied by United States Marshal Tolson, Sergeant Her and Detectives Hovey and Cormack Donella went to the saloon. At 8:40 McCarthy and his gang with the two women drove up to the saloon in a light farm wagon and alighted. When they entered the place they found the saloon closed about a card table in the rear of the saloon playing cards. Thinking the officers were saloon loungers the counterfeiters paid no attention to them, but passed into a rear room. At a given signal the officers crowded into the room and covered the men with net-covers. They were taken entirely off their guard.

In the pockets of John Brown five packages of bogus dollars, twenty dollars in each package, were found. Each of the other men had a small quantity of the spurious coin in their possession. After the capture the four prisoners and the women were handcuffed and brought to Omaha in their own wagon. The officers drove to the home of McCarthy, near Bellevue, where they searched the house, finding the outfit coming out of the gang hidden about.

Have Long Been Operating. The gang has been in active operation for several weeks and has during that time flooded the country with the spurious coin. It is said, being the "above, or man who disposed of it. The Bee, a few days ago published a story to this effect: McCarthy has for years been suspected of being a counterfeiter, and in fact was twice arrested on the charge of making and disposing of bogus money, but was never convicted.

His brother Thomas is now serving a fifteen-year sentence for counterfeiting. The McCarthy family has borne an unsavory reputation for years, and the sons, four in number, have been arrested, accredited with every crime on the calendar except murder. The notorious "Vic" McCarthy, who he like jail here three years ago while awaiting to be taken to the penitentiary to serve an eighteen-year sentence for a murderous assault, is the eldest son of this family. Another was known as "Black Ike," who died seven years ago. In life he was a convict.

All of the men refuse to talk, particularly McCarthy, who is in a very ugly mood at all times. The money captured is an excellent imitation, and is known as a "glass dollar," because of the amount of ground metal in the metal used to make them. They are defective in the milling and a trifle thicker than a good dollar.

ELECTRIC FOUNTAIN, "NAUTILUS."

IN THE CHICKAMAUGA CAMP

Doings of the Nebraska Boys at Their Rendezvous.

SECOND NEBRASKA IS FULLY EQUIPPED

Recruiting Officers Find No Difficulty in Securing Plenty of Men to Make Up the Full Quota.

CHICKAMAUGA, Ga., June 23.—(Special Correspondence.)—The Second Nebraska regiment has heard from its recruiting officers. They have not found the least trouble in securing volunteers among Nebraska's sons. Fifty recruits are enroute to Chickamauga and are expected to arrive here tomorrow.

The Second battalion of this regiment had some valuable experience in the drill exercise yesterday afternoon. The men marched in advance and rear guards to a point near where Grigsby's cowboys are located. The exercise lasted two and a half hours and the battalion showed up admirably.

Private Norris of Company M, who was wounded in his home at Grand Island, Neb., seriously ill, has appendicitis and his friends have been informed that he cannot recover.

Private Frank Burr, who was appointed second lieutenant in the regular army from this regiment, was a member of Company M.

Company M has received a fund of $50 from the Company M Aid society at Grand Island. Four hundred and fifty pounds of literature is enroute from the same society to Company M.

The members of the Second regiment are now fully equipped with guns, with the exception of the recruits. Nothing is lacking except canteens.

The regiment will participate in the division battle exercise Saturday, forming part of the column to be commanded by Colonel Bille.

The Second Nebraska regimental band has won an enviable reputation in the community and has become so popular that it is in demand at social functions and special events at the mountain resorts. Tonight the band played a "star" engagement in a grand concert at the Point hotel, on the summit of Lookout mountain. The hotel was connected by telephone with the newspaper offices and the principal hotels of the city and dozens of people enjoyed the music five miles away.

Maher's Case. The case of John G. Maher, of the Second Nebraska, who is being tried by court-martial for alleged disobedience of orders, has been continued until 9 o'clock Thursday morning. The question of Captain Fisher's eligibility to act as counsel for Maher has been officially raised. It was reported in the camp of the Second Nebraska today that Captain Fisher had been ruled out on the ground that he is responsible for a command. At division headquarters General Clark announced that it had not been decided whether or not Captain Fisher could act as counsel for Maher.

The Second Nebraska drilled in extended order today. The recruiting officers have been heard from and recruits are expected to arrive soon.

The health of the camp is good, and the boys are in excellent spirits.

The Second Nebraska is making a delightful place of its camp. Besides paving and curbing the streets prettily, the trees have been paved around with stone, and in places about the tents and spots have been arranged for flowers, and have been ornamented with trimmings of roses and ferns and provided with rustic vases, from which fragrant specimens of the most charming growths of the wild wood. Large letters of moss indicate the loveliness of a cultivated park. The credit for this work is due to all the members of the regiment. Many of the soldiers have manifested useful industry by weaving for their tents folding coats of reeds.

Brigadier General Colby, who is expected to arrive from Nebraska, will be heartily welcomed by the Second regiment. There are in this regiment a number of boys who were with General Colby in the battle of Wounded Knee. General Colby commanded the Nebraska brigade, in which the Second regiment fought during the Sioux war. It was two days after the battle of Wounded Knee that General Colby returned to the battlefield and picked up an Indian girl 2 years old, whom he adopted, and who has grown to be a fascinating girl.

Second Lieutenant Henry Allen, son of Senator Allen, and Private Frank Parr, both of Company L, having been appointed lieutenants in the regular army, will soon bid the regiment good-by.

Colonel Grigsby's Cowboys. Colonel Grigsby's regiment was today equipped with 1,020 Krug-Jorgensen carbines and the same number of Colt's revolvers. Word was received that the saddles and horse equipments for the regiment are enroute and will arrive in a few days. A regulation has been made for uniforms for the members of this regiment and with their arrival the command will be fully equipped.

ART AT THE EXPOSITION

On the south wall of the water color room hangs a picture by one of the best of the modern French water colorists—Madelaine Lemaire. It is a picture, light, graceful and pleasing, representing a group of men and women dancing the minuet in a French salon. They are dressed in the attractive costumes of silk, satin and velvet of the eighteenth century, and the textures are remarkably well preserved. The composition is very good, the figures in the foreground are carefully worked up; those in the back are merely suggested in an attractive way, as if by the crowd of people as a whole. Each figure is carefully drawn and painted in a very delicate, high key. The values have been sacrificed for purity of color; the faces have been painted in the painstaking Italian method of stippling, instead of broad washes. The handling of the costumes and floor has been much broader, although nothing has been left to accident. It is brilliantly transparent throughout, as the artist has used no opaque color, and it lacks a certain strength, it is exceedingly refined.

Nothing could more clearly show the difference between the French and Dutch schools of painting than a comparison in the water color room of this picture of Madelaine Lemaire's with Nos. 386 and 387 of Neuhaus. In the first place the disparity in the subject is striking. One is a simple, homely, "Dressing the Baby"—No. 386, and the "Evening Meal," 387—is broad and bold. In the former the painter has caught all of the sentiment of the group. A peasant mother dressing her baby, who, as he is stretched on his mother's knee, reaches out a chubby arm to play with the cat, while another solid, sturdy little figure stands in front. The whole is very low in tone, almost merging into the browns—yet still of color. The light coming from the left, and the light up the handle, marking where each detail—the table on which is a green bowl, the cat, the line of the wall back of the mother's head—adds the composition.

The woman's face is but roughly suggested, yet full of character—her hands are well drawn and seem to have been painted while in action, so well do they suggest it. Neuhaus has painted both 386 and 387 with opaque colors and with all the firmness and solidity of oil.

The "Evening Meal" the light comes in through the window at the right, and lights up a peasant and wife as they are serving themselves from the common dish. The dog, who waits his turn in front, is badly drawn, and wooden in outline, and in treatment, yet the group is so suggestive of reality that one overlooks the defects. Neuhaus has painted the common folk as they are in their humble, everyday life, and has painted them with a strength and directness which appeals to any one who will take the trouble to look at them. Another picture, which is very artistic, is that of a peasant woman, which is so suggestive of reality that one overlooks the defects. Neuhaus has painted the common folk as they are in their humble, everyday life, and has painted them with a strength and directness which appeals to any one who will take the trouble to look at them. Another picture, which is very artistic, is that of a peasant woman, which is so suggestive of reality that one overlooks the defects.

It is very artistic and very interesting, especially to those who have studied color by artificial light. I suppose it was an accident that it should have been hung high while on the line was hung a hideous Psyche—or whoever she may be—with a dislocated shoulder and a maimed hand—sitting on a bench in a garden of flowers, vainly looking at a little statue of Cupid—or whoever it may be—No. 125.

F. Hopkinson Smith, the artist, architect, author, has five or six sketches of the Nashville exposition—which, as they are loaned by one of the magazines, I infer were originally made as illustrations. They are excellent, and an effective and artistic in the same manner in which he has of late painted his Venetian sketches. He uses gray paper—which, of course, gives a tone to the whole sketch—uses opaque white for all the notes in his sketch, higher in value than the gray, and transparent areas, when he can, to make the greens look rather dark in value, but it gives a certain effect with very little work, although many deem the method as being unorthodox.

Miss Hawley, a teacher of water colors at the University of Texas, has painted a picture which is very artistic and effective in the same manner in which he has of late painted his Venetian sketches. He uses gray paper—which, of course, gives a tone to the whole sketch—uses opaque white for all the notes in his sketch, higher in value than the gray, and transparent areas, when he can, to make the greens look rather dark in value, but it gives a certain effect with very little work, although many deem the method as being unorthodox.
