SOCIETY DURING DOG DAYS

Swell Set Still Finds Something to Beguile the Sultry Tedium.

YOUNGER FOLKS HAVE THEIR SWAY

Some Most Enloyable Functions Chronicled as Having Filled Their Hour and Others Still Hold Forth Their Promise.

Omaha society made merry during the week just passed over a number of fair visitors. Luncheons, dances and picnics in honor of various guests from out of town went to make up a week of more or less joy to society's devotees. The reunion of a dozen pretty school girls from St. Mary's here during the last week has been marked by a number of enjoyable functions in their bonor, the dance of Miss Cady being the most noteworthy. The dance of Miss Creighton and the luncheon of Miss Webster, each in honor of visiting guests, were red letter functions. Miss Hargreaves of Lincoln has also been humerouly entertained. The affairs of the week almost entirely represented the younger set of Omaha society, and the zest with which they were all carried on proves conclusively that local society has something brilliant to look forward to, for when the present boarding school girls and gay collegians return home to settle down they will surely show their elders a thing or two.

Among other entertainments of the week recorded in the official annals, herewith annexed, will be noticed a dance at one of the state buildings on the exposition grounds. This suggests a series of pleasant affairs of this nature that may be arranged for the different state halls before the gates of the exposition shall have finally closed. Surely no more delightful places could be selected for the festivities of the society circle. And after the exposition, what? A movement is already on foot to purchase the Illinois state building at the conclusion of the great show, and by making the exterior of permanent character, transform it into a handsome home for a country club. There is room for such an organization here, and is the guest of Miss Carrie Midgley. its existence has been made precarious only by the lack of suitable quarters. With the prospect of obtaining such an elegant home an Omaha Country club could not help but be a go and a pretty rapid go at that.

When not dressed in "Mother Hubbards," vainly trying to keep cool, the feminine portion of Omaha society has put in its spare moments lately in the manufacture of paper flowers to be used in decorating the vehicles to appear in the grand Floral procession that will move along the Midway on August 2, two days before the arrival of the redmen and their squaws. Each of the participants in the novel pageant has picked her flower, and there are more paper flowers being made here today than woman is making a snug sum by turning out her handiwork of this character at the rate of $7 per 1,000, and less skilled amateurs are wrestling with the problem of making their own ornamentations.

Aside from the Flower parade the only event in the local society world scheduled for the near future, regarded as of first rank, is the dance of Miss Adeline Nash at her home on Thursday evening in honor of a young woman from the hub of the universe, which will again show that Omaha society intends to treat its distinguished guests in regal style.

was the luncheon on Friday afternoon given by Miss Ethel Tukey in honor of Miss Blanche Hargreaves of Lincoln, who has been visiting her the past week.

Mr. T. B. Norris on returning home Monday evening was surprised to find the grounds of his home lighted by Japanese lanterns and a crowd of friends present to greet him. The surprise was in honor of his birthday anniversary.

At the home of Miss Allen, on Friday night, there was an animated flutter of feminine chatter, with men enough for agreeable variation. The occasion was the meeting of the Riding club; later in the evening the equestrians took a jaunt to Florence and return.

Apart from the various dinners and luncheons for the strangers within the city's gates, one of the social functions of the week was the dance given by Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. Cady on Thursday evening in honor of the young women who are stopping The younger set predominated to a marked degree, and the idea that there would be a dearth of men owing to the dewattes to a fairond excursion. The party left Omaha on Friday night in Mr. Bidwell's private car and wil spend Sunday at Hot Springs, S. D. They will return home on Monday evening.

The dance given by Mrs. Creighton at her home on Monday night aroused the dancers of the smart set from the lethargy which seemed to have seized them for some time past. A prodigatity of Chinese lanterns illuminated the yard, rugs were strewn over the porches, while palms made many a cozy nook for the conversationally inclined. The guests from out of town were: Mrs. James Alan MacLeod, the Misses Johnson, Stewart, Lake and Bergen, Messrs. Megrette, Flynn and Morseman. About fifty were present.

The Hawk hailed decoration provided for, and it is expected it by megaphone and told its commander that nearly as many more will be secured at once, as it requires time to pro erly design and arrange the decorations. It is not to be presumed that the decore ions can be successfully accomplished with natural flowers during midsummer weather. This would be a practical impossibility, and even if the flowers could be secured, they would fade and wither long before their service was accomplished. Mrs. Travis is teaching her assistants to make paper flowers that are even more effective than naure's blossoms, and decidedly more durable. Most of the women are making their own flowers under her superintendence, and it has become quite the thing to give a tea or a luncheon and set the guests at work manufacture the material for the decorations. This is far from being an arduous employment, and in most cases, it is found really fascinating.

The hour of the parade has been set at 4 o'clock, and it will form on Twentieth street, just south of the Arch of States and outside the grounds. THEY POINT TO VICTORY. Sigurchends Have Always Been Prominent Feature of War Ships. Sad to relate our modern mariners give very little thought to figureheads. A war hip feels any number of times securer with few torpedoes up her sleeve than she possibly could with the most aesthetic or formidable figurehead on her stem. In fact, look about any harbor and note how few ships boast anything in the shape of this sort of a mascot. Yet time was when a ves one of ancient Egypt's dark eyed queens, being in the form of a lotus and so very it buried with her, but warships with animals carved upon the prows are known to have existed in Egypt before the day of this queen; in fact, as early as 1000 B. C. The subject usually corresponded to the name of the ship. This was before the introduction of rams. A few figureheads as well as anchors and rams were found in the ruins of the locks at Athens serve to give notion of the dimensions of ancient Grecian warships. The niche occupied on the Flying Dutchman by the human skeleton was the niche that in the middle ages was occupied by a saint, and this in turn was an outcome of a way they had in the days of the Roman consuls of taking their lares or tutelary gods to sea in the after part of the ship

Apparently each particular nation had favorite emblem. The owl was a conspinous on the Athenian ships as was the cock that emblem of vigilance, on the prows of the Phoenicians. The shining blade of St Theodore, the patron saint of the Venetians, make up the party will be gowned in pink was their favored figurehead, while the Britorgandies, with pink picture hats and pink ish lion became so universally the figurechrysanthemum parasols. A well known head of English ships that other nations who followed closely the naval architecture of He will of course wear the conventional this "first nation on the sea" adopted also the tion, as much to conceal their identity as because they were built after English models. So common was this that in France te curve of the bow was known as the 'sweep of the lion.

Of the few figureheads preserved at our naval academy that of the Delaware, which was launched at Norfolk, in 1820, attracts the most attention. This image, called by ribbons, will be placed artistically here and some Tecumseh, by others Powhatan, or even King Philip, is not believed to be a black gowns with large yellow hats and portrait, but rather to represent a great sachem or a powhatan, a title having among will be of black with yards upon yards of Indians a significance quite like that of will occur in connection with the exposition yellow satin ribbons fashioned into large Pharaon among the Egyptians. At any rate, here he is, with his tomahawk, his arrows and his stern brow, as much a part of the scheme as the cadets themselves. After the civil war the figurehead of the Columbus, which Commodore Macauley burned and sunk at Norfolk in 1861 in order that the confederates might not gain possession, was fished up and brought to the cademy. The figurehead of the Macedonian, which was for four years used as a practice crulser, is there, too. The Macedonian, originally a French ship, was captured from the French by the English. In 1812, after a have heard of the "fiestas" or flower car- design is to be used, and carried out in short, flerce fight, she became an American ship. A wooden figurehead in the shape of a lion did duty as a mascot on her quarter deck at the time of her capture. Other of our historic figureheads are the bust of

Washington, from the line-of-battle ship by

Returns with Gold from Klondike. VICTORIA, B. C., July 23.-The steamer Garrone arrived here today from St. Michael. Its purser reports that its 166 passengers brought down close to $1,000,000, but talk with the passengers leads to the belief that this amount is exaggerated. Most of the passengers came down the Yukon on the steamer Seattle No. 1. They complain bitterly of the monopolistic tendencies of certain trading corporations doing business in the northwest and say that the corporations are trespassing on the rights and privileges of individuals to such an extent that some decisive action will have to be taken by the authorities at Washington.
