SOCIETY IN THE MID SUMMER

Kaleidoscopic Changes Present Many Novel and Striking Features.

DUT-OF-TOWN GUESTS IN EVERY HOME

Liveliest Social Calendar Ever Shown in Omaha at This Senson of the Year.

Midsummer with almost all the society folk still in town is a novelty for Omaha, whose enjoyment is due to the exposition. As a result, however, the social calendar is better filled than it ever has been at this season and the different entertainments have been following one another not only in quick succession, but also with kaleidoscopic variety. At the several turns during the past week society has flashed forth a dancing party, a morning-glory breakfast, a bicycle tournament, with numerous dinners, luncheons, picnics and Midway excursions

The flower parade Tuesday will be the central social figure of the coming week. In fact, it has held society in anticipation for some time. At one of the recent entertainments the men who accepted invitations were put at work making the paper flowers that are to adorn the chariot of the hostess. Floral trophies from the favorite carriages promise soon to be as popular with the men as brass buttons are with the feminine admirers of the soldier boys.

Miss Nash's Dancing Party.

A notable social incident of the week was the dance given by Miss Nash at her home on Thursday evening in henor of the Misses Creeden and Stewart. Miss Nash was assisted by her sisters. Mesdames Crofoot and Cartan, and Mrs. George Mercer. The spacious parlors were transformed into a ballroom and refreshments were served in the dining room, which was a bower of orchids. roses and sweet peas. The music was exbilarating and the wide porches of the stately home afforded delightful lounging places, where one could listen to the music floating out through the vine-draped windows. About eighty guests were present.

Miss Brown's Lawn Party. The beacon light in the tower of the hos bitable home of J. J. Brown was lighted for the fete champetre with which Miss Brown entertained a number of friends in honor of her guest, Miss Clark, on Friday evening The grounds were bright with fire-fly lights and on a large dancing floor raised in the center of the lawn, gaily decked with bunting, the summer girl and her attendant squire whiled away a delightful evening Delicious refreshments were served on the

A few years ago I purchased a bottle of your Pe-ru-na and after seeing its results, recommended it to my grocer who was troubled with dyspepsia, the curing of which induced her to sell it in her store. She has sold large amounts of it. My daughter has just been cured of jaundice with Pe-ru-na. My pen would grow weary were I to begin to tell you of the numerous cures Pe-ru-na has effected in our immediate vicinity within the last couple of years.'

ing. General Manager T. S. Clarkson is to opening of the exposition, as he was about be the marshal of the parade. Starting from to leave Omaha, and with great Joy be the Horticultural building the line of said that so soon as he could arrange his march will be confined to the Bluff tract, affairs, he was off for Paris. Years of work passing between the Nebraska and Illinois opened out before him. He was already buildings on the right and the lows and a successful sculptor in Chicago; he had

building and through the main boulevard. There is great dissatisfaction among the inglittle bronze water nymph-789-and the women of the executive committee, as also among the women who have agreed to participate in the flower parade, over the man- ing. He was not old and he was at the ner in which they have been treated by very threshold of his career; he was de-Mrs. H. McCall Travis. When the parade voted to his chosen profession and happy was first suggested it was announced to in the thought of having an atelier in the them that all the arrangements would be provided under the direction of Mrs. Travis. who was employed by the exposition to get event of the exposition. The time of the up the parade and do all the work required to insure its success. For this work she has been drawing upon the exposition treasday evening. All week the members of the ury for expense money at the rate of $8 per society set have been busy preparing the day, in addition to the $200 which she was decorative material, burnishing up their to receive as her salary. For this she was carriages, making paper flowers and putting | 1.0t only to organize the parade, but also to motion.

Instead of doing this Mrs. Travis has left almost all this work to the committee in charge. The women who wish to consult her have been unable to find her. Instead of making designs for the carriages she has simply told them to look over her collection as follows: Wheeler, jr., secretary; Mesdames Will of photographs and select something they Carter, Charles E. Squires, J. E. Baum, would like to imitate. The instruction with reference to making the flowers has been so crude that it has had to be supplemented by number of Omaha women who are experts in that line and without whose assistance the floral decorations could not have been prepared. Worse yet, not content with the munificent remuneration promised by the exposition, Mrs. Travis has been devoting her time, although paid for by the exposition management, to the decoration of private carriages, for which she is charging the owners from $30 to $50 each. Naturally, the women who have put themselves to so great trouble to make the flower parade a success do not relish this kind of treatment from the woman who is being paid to do the work and claiming all the glory. The parade will without question be a great success, but it will be due entirely to the selfsacrificing and unremitting labors of the Omaha women who have volunteered to act on the executive committee.

ART AT THE EXPOSITION

Very beautiful in line and dignified in pose is the statue of Neptune of the electric fountain. His form is strong and muscular; with the right hand he holds his trident, the three-pronged symbol of his power, with which he shattered rocks and called forth or subdued storms. His head is bent and his left arm is extended as if in the act of quelling the troubled waters. As the state of the sea is varying, so this god of the sea is sometimes represented in violent agitation and sometimes-as the sculptor has here fashioned him-in a state of repose. One foot rests on the head of a dolphin, one of the symbols of Neptune. The legend has it that Amphitrite, his wife, at first fled from his love, but he came to her one day riding on a dolphin, and thus won her affections, showing even at that early day that the feminine mind did not disdain accessories. For this timely service the dolphin was ever after in favor with the sea god. The statue is placed on top of a Roman Doric column. A little below half way of the height the column is decorated by an 21. Mr. Al Patrick; the Patrick tallyho ornamented band with projecting Roman rows. The column sets on a nede 22. Mrs. A. H. Noyes; Ak-Sar-Ben colors each side of which projects a conventional and continued until midnight, the cool even ship's prow, while between the prows are dolphins blowing water into the lagoon.

The effect of the ensemble, of the seren and majestic statue standing on the deco rative column is impressive, if for no other reason than by its simplicity. The figure can be seen from all parts of the lagoon court; and although in comparison to the MacMonnies fountain in the court of honor t may seem inadequate, yet were it larger and more obtrusive it would probably dwarf the adjacent buildings and diminish the apparent size of the lagoon. And as the main object of the fountain is to be only a decorative unit in the whole composition, it would have failed in its mission had it been more dominating. Although the idea and the pose of the statue are not original, the sculptor has modeled it with loving care. He has represented the god with outstretched hand to still the restless waves, yet how indifferent he is to the play of the water about him. This unchanging god, Neptune, looks out unperturbed either by the past or the future. Wars wage about him, nations rise and fall, yet the ceaseless throb of the sea, his home, has been neither quickened nor diminished in ts pulsation, since the Greeks worshipped him as Poseidon and Phidias immortalized him in stone on the Parthenon. What irony of fate that this statue of the implacable god should be the last earthly production of the sculptor-Emil denry Wuertz-before he was swallowed up in the cold depths of the relentless sea! It was only a few weeks after the statue was finished and placed in position that he will form in line at the Horticultural build- | Rogne. I met him a few days after the Wisconsin buildings on the left, and circling exhibited at the salon and had received several times around the plaza in front of medals at the World's fair and at Nashville: I have previously referred to his charmcarefully studied figure of a boy listening to the sea-788-which are in the Art buildcongenial, artistic atmosphere of Paris. In the statue of the electric fountain we have not only a beautiful, decorative figure, but a memento of an artist whose creative hand ETHEL EVANS. has been stayed.

DEFINING THE STAMP DUTY Commissioner Scott Rules on Brokers

and Grain in Storage-Collector Houte's Rulings. There has been considerable discussion as o what constitutes a commercial broker under the new revenue law, and the decision of Commissioner Scott given to A J. Daugherty, internal revenue collector at Peorin gives light on the subject. The ruling was handed down on July 1, and is A member of the Board of Trade, usually denominated as a commission man, is to be regarded as a commercial broker and subject to special tax under paragraph section, 2 of the act of June 13, 1898, if be negotiates sales or purchases of goods as a broker. If it is denied by any such com-mission man that he transacts business as a broker, you will please obtain and sens to this office a statement of the grounds or which such denial is based. Commissioner Scott also gave the fol-owing ruling: When grain coming from some local staion is transferred through an elevator and into cars for shipment and a warehouse receipt showing weight and grade is is-sued, the stamp tax of 25 cents must be paid on such receipt. The report comes by way of Chicago that new clerk is soon to be appointed to the chief of police in the place of Clerk King, now serving in that capacity. From ar Omaha man interested in police matters who has just returned from the lake city is is learned that Charles Kubat, an Omaha attorney, has been over there during the past week with introductions from the police of this city to familiarize himself with the Bertillon system of identifying criminals. Kubat has been giving it out that he is simply preparing himself for his duties as clerk to the chief of police, which he thinks he will be fitted to perform in a few days Daughters of Pocahontas Dance. The Red Men and Daughters of Pocahontas of Omaha enjoyed a pleasant danc ing party in Labor temple right. The purty was given by Minnehaha council, No. 2, Daughters of Pocahontas, ing making dancing enjoyable. Ice cream and cake were served during the evening.

GET THE BOXES Omaha Boys at Chickamauga Will Feast Today on Good Things from Home.

Wednesday night Major Wilcox of Brownng. King & Co. sent by express several boxes addressed to the Omaha Guarda at Camp Thomas, Chickamauga. These boxes contained something over a ton of good things intended to make camp life more bearable. It was hoped the consignment would reach its destination in time for Sunday. Last night Major Wilcox received the following message: CHICKAMAUGA PARK, Ga., July 30.

Major R. S. Wilcox: Boxes received. Each and all send thanks and greetings to our Omaha friends. C. H. WILSON, Captain Commanding Company G.
