and given it some consideration: " 'Png-png-png!' but sometimes its like 'pwow-pwow-pwow!' It all depends what kind of a bullet and how it scoots through the air, I think."

William Young of Company F. Sixth infantry, who was wounded in the right leg in the same engagement, and whose face and beard gleam dark amidst the lighter complexions of his neighbors, was sure the sound made by a Mauser bullet was "Dz-dz-dz! "I can just hear it rining all around me," he said with the air of one trying to recall a dear moment in his life. "It was before Santiago on July 11. We were only a few hundred feet from the Spaniards and the fire was too terrible for anything. The full strength of our regiment was 450 and about one-third of that number fell in that hail of bullets, 'Dz-dz-dz!' they went."
