Lost in a Big Cornfield.

He did not return, and becoming a excepting the sack in which he had intended scoured. The search is still being continued, but it has been utterly fruitless so far. Some one reported having seen the boy Saturday morning in a cornfield about two miles south of Mr. Satre's, but this clue is of little value. There are two theories held, one of which is that the boy decided to leave home, but the other is more generally believed, which is that owing to the heat or some other cause, he became mentally deranged and that he is still wandering around somewhere. The parents are almost crazed

Getting into conversation with some of the sports of the place, it was not long until he was told of the home talent, and intimated that he beat all the farm boys up in Michigan. He said he had saved $200 on the farm, and he was willing to bet he could beat in a race. The Jewell men gathered up the money and the race was run. Barnett was easily a winner, and he quietly left the town with the $200, and the maledictions of those who had been foolish enough to bet.

Fifty-Second lows Returns. DES MOINES, Ia., Aug. 27.—Advices to the executive office say that the Fiftysecond Iowa will leave Camp Thomas, Chickamauga park, Monday, arriving in Des Moines some time Wednesday.

Iowa Political Notes. Senator Gear will lead Burlington's dele-gation to the state convention. The Iowa press is having a good deal of fun with the Pottawattamie county demo-crats who refused to mention the Chicago platform for fear they might have to stand Of the candidates on the democratic ticket in Benton county, two are bankers, two sa-loon keepers and one a farmer who would be county judge, though he has never seen the inside of a law book.

The Second district has nominated Judge Ney for congress. In the Seventh the fusionists have named Holly, which a political opponent asserts is but one removed from folly, as his election is impossible.

"Jumping Jim Weaver" is a term that was applied to the general in 1894 because he had to jump his residence to be a candidate for congress against Hager in the Ninth, for he did not live in the district.

Three congressional fusion conventions have thus far been held in Iowa and not a democrat has been nominated. Weaver in the Sixth is a populist and Finn in the Eighth and Garretson in the Eleventh are cast off republicans. Six years ago when Boies was made governor the democratic party was all powerful in the state, but now it is morely a memory. now it is merely a memory.

Finn, the fusionist candidate for congress in the Eighth, is roundly abusing the men southeast of town. Saturday his mother sent him into the cornfield after a few ears of corn. He did not return, and becoming a tween a man who puts his accumulations little frightened at his absence, the family of a lifetime into money and lends it to the began a search for him. No trace was found poor at exorbitant rates and the man who excepting the sack in which he had intended puts his money into lands and rents them to carry the corn. A searching party was formed and the entire neighborhood was formers. The farmers. The property he accumulated through the purchase of tax titles.

Dr. Green of Cedar Rapids has informed his friends that he has every reason to believe that he will be elected bishop at the Episcopal convention that convenes at Dubuque, September 6. The Ottumwa Courier calls attention to the fact that not a single democrat has yet announced himself as a candidate for office in that county for the fall election. The Des Moines Leader observes that the way the Johnnies are being put up for office makes the stay-at-home politicians wish the war had lasted a little longer.

The Glenwood Opinion declares that the Iowa democracy gives encouragement to young men by nominating them for office to which election is absolutely impossible. The Sioux City Journal declares that if the war had lasted much longer the gov-ernment would have had to print some Dewey cards of thanks with only the date line left blank.

FIVE STEPS IN THE RATIFICATION

How Copies Are Prepared for the Interested Governments-Action of the Peace Commissioners Not Final.

About the first of December will be added to the collection of important international documents in the State department at Washington the treaty of peace concluded between Spain and the United States at the conference to be held in Paris about the 1st of October. This treaty will take rank in importance and interest with the treaties of the wars of 1776 and 1812 and the Mexican war.

The action of the peace commission at Paris will not be final. The treaty on which they agree will be subject to ratification by both countries. According to the constitution and laws of the United States no treaty with this country is operative until it has gone through five stages, of which the negotiation and signing by the peace commissioners is only the first. When the peace commissioners have reached a determination the treaty as agreed to will be copied in duplicate, and each copy will be signed by all the commissioners. The copies will be made with the pen, for the typewriter is not recognized in diplomacy. In the Spanish and in the American copy the Americans. The American copy will be brought back American commission and delivered to the secretary of state. In the State department a message for congress will be prepared. It will embody the text of the treaty. It will be written on heavy sheets of blue paper. fastened together at the top with red silk ribbon, the president will sign this message and Assistant Secretary Pruden will take it to the capitol, where the senate, gathered in special session, will be waiting to receive it. When the message has been delivered to the senate the chairman of the committee on foreign relations will move an executive session, and behind doors the message will be read. It will probably follow the usual custom and be referred to the committee on foreign relations. When the senate adjourns it will be delivered to a confidential messenger from the government printing office, who will carry it to the public printer, and under his personal supervision it will be put into type by a special set of compositors. When the work is complete and about 100 copies have been run off the forms and proofs will be locked up in the vault. The copies will be delivered to the secretary of the senate, who will receipt for them, number each one and deliver them to the members of the senate. Approval by the Senate.

When the treaty has been approved (or the senate has "advised and consented to its ratification"), a new copy will be made and returned to the president, with the signature of the president of the senate (the vice president of the United States), attested by the secretary of the senate. The president, on receipt of notice that the senate has given its consent, will ratify the treaty. attorney; T. S. Westfall, judge; Enos Merand the State department will prepare what is known as an exchange copy. This is the copy which will be sent to Madrid, to be preserved there as the permanent record of the government between the countries. Spain also will prepare an exchange copy and send it to the United States.

When it was customary to use wax for the official seal of a state document it was usual for the State department to inclose the seal of an exchange treaty in a round silver box, having the national coat of arms in relief. Now that wafers are used, this is not done, and the exchange treaty we send to Spain will doubtless be a very plain document. It will be written in English, on long sheets fastened at the side with a ribbon. president will sign it, Secretary Day's signature will attest that of the president, and then the document will be taken to the keeper of the seal of state. It is not enough that the keeper should recognize the signatures of William McKinley and William R. Day. He must have a signed order from the president, directed to him, before he will make the impression of the great seal on the red wafer at one corner of the document. The treaty, then complete, may be inclosed in a box, but it will probably be placed in a portfolio of green leather, embossed and stamped with a gold border. The copy which the queen regent of Spain will sign and Prime Minister Sagasta will forward to this country will differ from ours. It will be in two languages-Spanish and French-and it will probably be engrossed on vellum and inclosed in a carved or ornamented box. Almost all the exchange treaties

The exchange of ratifications is the fourth step toward the completion of the treaty. The fifth and final step is the proclamation of the treaty by the president. The form used by the president is as follows: To All to Whom These Presents Shall Come,
