the Auditorium soon after 9 o'clock, here they were received and by the local committee and provided with badges and programs. The big building was lavishly decorated with banners emblematic of the order and zemzem was served from numerous bowls to those who required refreshment. The Omaha Concert band rendered a short program of popular music while the nobles were congregating. and then Noble Henry Hardy, illustrious potentate of Tangier temple, briefly bade the wanderers welcome in behalf of Tangier and Sesostris temples. He suggested that it afforded him especial gratification to extend this hospitality, as the exposition afforded a means of enjoyment which all would appreciate. He said that it is unnecessary to multiply words to tell how sincerely glad they are to entertain the visiting nobles, for such occasions give to life its brightest recollections. After commenting on the ennobling charities that represented one of the objects of the organization, he introduced Noble Frank E. Moores, mayor of Omaha, clty.

Other Cordial Greetings.

Mayor Moores declared that Omaha felt highly favored, as it had been selected as the most fertile oasis in this hemisphere. In years gone by the drouth had made the sands to hot that even Shriners had to step high and often, but now the sun of prosperity is once more shining. In conclusion he presented the visitors with the golden keys to the city and invited them to take anything they wanted that was not nailed down.

In behalf of the exposition management President Wattles expressed the pleasure with which its gates were opened to these guests. He declared that no social or benevolent organization was better known all over the world than the Order of the Mystic Shrine. Wherever an intelligent, progressive, Christian community exists the order is found. The beneficial influence that it exerts in every community is so well known and appreciated that whenever the Shriners meet they are received with the heartfelt greeting of brother to brother.

Continuing President Wattles eulogized the magnificence of the exposition and the value of the lesson that it teaches. He spoke of the wonderful resources that are here exploited and declared that he now had the pleasure of welcoming the nobles to a place of education and entertainment that is unsurpassed.

To these greetings E. F. Allen of Kansas City, imperial potentate, responded in a very graceful address. He said no people in the world are more capable of appreciating the was exhausted. lavish hospitality that has been extended to them than the Shriners.
