Victor Rosewater offered a resolution that the committee go into executive session, excluding all outsiders, to consider the reor ganization of the legislative ticket. Chairman Burbank ruled it out of order on the ground that it was not germane to the work of the committee, as the committee had no power to take from or add to the ticket unless there is a vacancy. An appeal from the decision of the chair was

There is nothing in the resolution introduced calling for an executive session of retirement of any candidate on the ticket; but there is also nothing in the way of the committee acting as a conference to induce certain candidates to withdraw their names in the interest of party success. There is ne laboring man on the ticket, and no representative of the large German element in the county. On the other hand, there are six lawyers among the candidates. There are 200 lawyers in the county who vote the republican ticket, who are represented by six candidates, while 11,800 other republican voters are represented by six. Unless the ticket is reconstructed I can see nothing but disaster ahead of the party in the county this year."

What Webster Knows.

When Mr. Rosewater concluded there were calls for John L. Webster, who promptly responded, and after some little jollying of the committee, said: "I know nothing in politics but republicanism. I have never fought against any nominees of a republican convention, and never expect to. A republican convention is made up of delegates supposed to represent the republican party, and who are elected by methods prescribed by law. I think it unfortunate that the fitness of the candidates should be discussed in open meeting. Those who have grievances should air them in private. It comes with bad grace for faultfinders to criticise the nominees on the republican ticket when there is a whole list of democratic candidates against whom not one word has been said.

Mr. Webster: The committee has no power o take from the ticket any man who has the credentials of the convention which nominated him.

Mr. Webster: I have heard this bribery harge before. To whom does it refer? When a man who pretends to be a republican harges bribery against the republican party, it is not creditable to him and it is not in good grace nor honorable in Mr. Rosewater to make such a statement.

Mr. Rosewater: I agree with Mr. Webster that these are matters which should be dissussed in a private meeting and the resolution introduced here called for an execuive session of the committee. I want to support the whole ticket, but there are some things which I cannot do. I cannot make people believe that wrong is right. It is easy to say that the county will give a republican majority of 3,500. I remember one time that I told the state committee that this county would give an adverse the committee which would indicate that majority of 5,000 for the republicans and work by the present limitations of the Mr. Webster took issue with me and assured the committee that the county would cautioned the committee it had better calculate on a majority of 5,000 against us, and the returns raised my figures to 11,600, That was in the campaign of 1890. I know it has been repeatedly charged that I am preparing to ask the legislature for favors. but that is not so. I have no ambition for office and am not a candidate for senator. I am interested only in republican success. The state ticket is at stake and a local ticket which requires scratching by the republican voters will injure every other republican candidate. I cannot support the straight ticket as it is now constituted without stullifying myself. I was told the other day that Mr. Webster had promised to have a couple of the candidates to withdraw and I have waited for him to do so, but up to this time he has not done it.

A member of the committee asked if Mr. Rosewater had any other than the one reason for wanting the ticket reorganized and Mr. Rosewater replied that he had suggested several reasons, but one of the strongest was that with fifteen names on the legislative ticket the Germans, whom the republicans expected to support the party in the coming campaign, have no representative and that organized labor is also without recognized representation.

This completed the discussion and the meeting broke up.

AK-SAR-BEN IV IS ALL READY

Gallant King of Quivera Prepares for His Entry to His Capital City.

GORGEOUS PAGEANTS IN HIS HONOR

Forty Beautiful Floats Will Illustrate the Glory and Might of the Great Monarch and Resources of His Realm.

The last bit of tinsel has been placed on the gorgeous figures that adorn the floats prepared for the Ak-Sar-Ben pageants. Paint and powder have been applied in liberal quantitles to the imposing representatives of popular heroes and heroines of history and legend, and they are quite ready to pass in review before the tens of thousands of spectators who will line the streets of Omaha during the first week in October. Within the big den of the Knights of Ak Sar-Ben the floats are carefully guarded by day and by night by a detachment of the city fire department, while a half hundred artists and artisans under the watchful eye of Chief Artist Renze carefully put on the last bits of finery that go to complete the beautiful spectacle. When it is said that for the last eight months workmen have been employed in building the floats, at a cost of somewhat over $20,000, and when it is recalled that the slightest flame would quickly eat up the beautiful but frail creaions of the artists' handiwork, the impor tance of guarding them against the danger of fire may be best appreciated. During the last week one hose company, with a squad of city firemen, moved into the Den, and from now until the pageants start to move in grand procession the firemen will guard series of floats will be awarded the palm of giory. The entire forty floats are of a than anything ever before presented by the Knights of Ak-Sar-Ben, perhaps, by any other similar organization in this country. The twenty allegorical floats, illustraive of a popular American work, are beautiful beyond description. They will compose the Ak-Sar-Ben parade, which will be seen here on the evening of Tuesday, October 4. The twenty electrical floats, each brilliantly illuminated by several hundred incandescent lamps, will make up the grand electrical pageant of Thursday evening, October 6, The Coronation ball will be held at the Den on the evening of Friday, October, 7, and will be the climax of the most brilliant autumnal festivities ever held in the west.

Tomorrow evening will be an eventful night at the Den of the knights. At this time will occur the last and probably the best initiation of the season. PIRATE BARBERS LOCKED UP

Held for Robbing a Pair of Country Boys.

Another highway robbery in a barber shop occurred last night at 103 North Sixteenth street, where two chairs are in charge of Frank Ammandola and R. S. Wylie. Albert Nord and Peter Peterson, exposition visitors from Emerson, Neb., were passing by the place when the barbers invited them to enter, pointing out the fact that they needed a shave. The young men yielded and placed themselves in the barbers' hands to be shorn. When the shave was completed the strangers say that they were put through a further process, which they understood was included n the single charge. Their hair was sham pooed, singed and finally anointed with perfume which it was claimed was identical with that which Parisian nobility used in the bath. When their transfiguration was omplete Peterson and Nord were confronted with bills of $1.95 and $1.30 respectively. They protested, but the barbers brandished razors and declared that they would never be allowed to leave without paying. The amount was finally collected and the young men made their escape. An alligator leather pocketbook was taken from the letter box at Ninth and Farnam streets Friday. It contained a number of railroad passes, all made out in the name of Peter Clark, division superintendent of the Philadelphia & Reading road. The opinion at the postoffice is that the pocketbook was stolen and afterward dropped into the letter box by the thief. There was no money in it. There was but one letter in the box at the time and this is thought to preclude the idea that the pocketbook was dropped in accidentally.
